ArtFields® 2015 Update For Artists

Sept. 14, 2014, is the first day artists from 12 Southeastern states can submit an entry for ArtFields® 2015, taking place in Lake City, SC. If your panic alarm just went off - breathe - you still have until Nov. 14, 2014, to get that entry in. If you're still hearing that alarm - you can submit an entry submission of a work in progress, but that final entry better look exactly like the plans you submitted. After that you might as well get used to the idea that you might be a slacker artist - one who can always talk a good game on what you want to do, but never follow through. Have another beer and dream on about what you would do with that top prize of $50,000.

In our efforts to be your regional source for info about ArtFields®, we offer you some links to posts we've made at Carolina Arts News (http://carolinaartsnews.wordpress.com/) our blog for info about artist's opportunities - among many other visual art related topics.

Here's a link to the call for entries (http://carolinaartsnews.wordpress.com/2014/08/04/artfields-2015-in-lake-city-sc-calls-for-entries-for-competition-for-a-share-of-100000-deadline-is-nov-14-2014/). This blog post also offers some images of past entries to ArtFields® which will give you an "out of the box" view of what "one" entry can be.

Here's a link to ArtFields® 2015 rules (http://carolinaartsnews.wordpress.com/2014/08/07/artists-info-to-prepare-for-artfields-2015-in-lake-city-sc-from-apr-24-may-2-2015/).

One change in the rules that we found should be of interest to all 2-D artists. The limitations on size, which has been in place the first two years of ArtFields® has been lifted. For those of you who paint or draw BIG - go for it. Just remember it's your responsibility to get your entry to Lake City, if selected.

If selected? That's right, no matter how many entries ArtFields® 2015 receives, only 400 or so will make the cut. And, news about the small town in South Carolina that has put up $100,000 in cash prizes is getting around to those other 10 states, beyond the Carolinas, but North and South Carolina still have the edge on all others. You are the closest to Lake City, and you're being fed info and tips from Carolina Arts.

So, if you're still on the fence about sending in an entry this year, make a visit to the ArtFields® website at (www.artfieldssc.org) and check it out like you would your bank statement looking for lost money.

ArtFields® 2015 Update For Visitors

The third ArtFields® event will take place Apr. 24 through May 2, 2015, in Lake City, SC. Mark that in your smart phone's calendar.

People who come visit Lake City to see the art during ArtFields® are just as important to this event as the art is. If you come and see the art and register to vote, you'll take part in helping determine 3 out of the 4 of the cash awards. Only those works of art that receive the most votes from the public have the chance to be selected by the jury panel to be the top winner of $50,000. The registered, voting public also selects the People's Choice winners in 2-D and 3-D categories ($12,500 each). It's only the Juried Award, selected by the jury panel, that the public has no hand in ($25,000).

In previous years about 20,000 + people have come to ArtFields® to see what it was all about, yet only 5,000 + registered to vote and of those good folks only 2,500 cast a vote.

ArtFields® was designed to be a participation event - not just a lookie-loo festival. And all you have to do is give your e-mail address and show ID to prove who you are to register. Voting can be done in Lake City or from your home, as long as you do it by the set deadline. It's easy and your vote could help an artist win part of the $75,000 people's choice awards. Last year only registered visitors received a full color catalog of all the entries.

Other news important to visitors for ArtFields® 2015 is that the new "The Inn at the Crossroads", located at 128 West Main Street in Lake City, right in the heart of the event, will open this October 2014. You can make reservations starting on Sept. 1, 2014, (for dates between Apr. 24 - May 2, 2015) through their website at (www.theinnatthecrossroads.com) or by calling 843/394-2100. Actually, you might want to book a stay any time during the rest of 2014 to go see the Francisco de Goya show on view through Jan. 3, 2015, at the Jones-Carter Gallery in Lake City.

Anyway, voting is very important during ArtFields®. Last year people planning to come to Lake City for the event could pre-register, if they do that again in 2015 - we'll let you know all about it.

The Queen Reigns On

For awhile, it looked like our cover artist in August, Edwina Bringle, was going to unseat our reigning Queen of Facebook, Wan Marsh of Charlotte, NC, who had her art on our June 2014 cover, but in the end, Bringle came in second during our Summer fun cover competition.

As of this writing, Bringle's cover art attracted 5,904 views on Facebook, with 121 shares. Wan Marsh's cover reached 7,440 people with 129 shares.

Of course our August issue broke the 100,000 + download mark, but that doesn't have much to do with Facebook.

If I've learned anything about Facebook during this Summer competition, it is that you have to strike early and hard if you want to get a lot of people's attention on Facebook as the numbers fall off sharply after the first week.

Anyone With a Clue - Help

For some reason, sometime in July, our Wordpress blog, Carolina Arts Unleashed, stopped giving us access to make posts on it. You can still go there and see all the posts made from the beginning, but we can no longer make new posts there. We have tried to find out what happened, but with most of this social media stuff - there is no one you can call for help. Linda, my better half, and the only tech minded person here at Shoestring Publishing, has tried everything, including searching the Internet for help, but has found nothing.

If anyone knows how to help us with this mess - give us a call at 843/825-3408.

A Few House Keeping Notes

This Summer there were a few problems that seemed to be happening over and over again. The two biggest ones relate to our deadline - the 24th of the month, prior to the month when your exhibit starts and what makes a reception an opening reception.

The Deadline

Again, the deadline is "always" the 24th of the month, prior to the month when your exhibit starts. We want to make sure our readers have an opportunity to go see your exhibit from the very beginning.

If your exhibit starts Oct. 1 - we want your info before Sept. 24. If it starts Oct. 15 - we want your info before Sept. 24. If it starts Oct. 31 - we want your info before Sept. 24. The deadline is always the 24th, even if it is on a Sunday or Holiday.

Opening Receptions

If your exhibit is on view from Sept. 1 - 30, you can't have an opening reception on Sept. 13. Sept. 13 can only be a reception. Opening receptions are for the first day an exhibit is on view - only.

City of North Charleston, SC, Features Works by Christine Bush Roman and Nancy Wyman Ray

The City of North Charleston's Cultural Arts Department is pleased to present mixed media works by local artist Christine Bush Roman and works of ink on paper by Rock Hill, SC, artist, Nancy Wyman Ray, at the North Charleston City Gallery, located in the Charleston Area Convention Center, in North Charleston, SC. The concurrent solo exhibitions will be on view from Sept. 4-30, 2014, with a free public reception on Thursday, Sept. 4, from 5-7pm.

Work by Christine Bush Roman

In the exhibit entitled, The Little Ones, Christine Bush Roman presents a collection of abstract works filled with personal symbols that serve to create a narrative about human behavior and our individual experiences of reality. Created through a variety of media, including acrylic, fabric, ink, pastel, paper, spray paint, and more, these works distort images of sky, ocean, and landscape to create gateways into a subconscious world.

"Within this world I depict voyages into memories, dreams, and imagination," Bush Roman explains. "Through the painting, layering, destroying, and recreating, I work through my feelings about the wavering quality of human behavior."

Feelings like guilt, confusion, anger, love and nostalgia resonate throughout the colorful, textured world represented in each piece, with recurring symbols playing an important role in the artist's narrative. These symbols appear as both icons and physical objects, such as fabrics. Used clothes, tablecloths, curtains, and even bath sponges are buried under media or stuck onto the surface.

"These fabrics allow for a transfer of energy from their previous owner into my work and they are a link to an experience or place," Bush Roman says. "Even when the collaged materials are obscured, the energy still remains and affects my behavior as I approach the canvas."

Bush Roman received a Bachelor Fine Arts in Drawing and Painting from the University of Georgia in 2006 and returned to earn a Master of Fine Arts in the same concentration in 2013. Her work explores themes relating to human behavior and is executed in a variety of media with an emphasis on bright color, texture, pattern, and symbolism.

Bush Roman began showing her work in 2002 and participates in solo and group exhibitions throughout the Southeastern United States and abroad. Additionally, she is a member of the Charleston Artist Collective and is one of 18 artists chosen to participate in the inaugural year of Charleston Supported Art, a platform to connect emerging and established artists and collectors. She currently works out of her home studio in Johns Island, SC, and instructs art classes at Redux Contemporary Art Center in Downtown Charleston.

Nancy Wyman Ray's exhibition, Messages, features ink drawings from her series "Places". Her works are created using the blackest of ink and whitest of paper, with her pen affording her the control to explore the range of values and textures that can be produced with a simple line or dot. In general her work is abstract, but representational images do seem to develop through her use of high contrast designs and a variety of textures, depths, and values. These design elements often evolve into landscapes of fanciful places, or an inner vision of something in the world that the artist finds fascinating.

"These images and landscapes feel more like 'messengers' than pure design, but I'm not always conscious of the 'message' while composing the picture," Wyman Ray explains. "At the time, it just feels important to include a certain figure in a certain setting or composition. Later I am sometimes able to clarify my intentions." Each piece combines stark contrast, intricate design, and thoughtful composition with direction from the artist's muse to create an artful picture that is both dynamic and hypnotic.

Wyman Ray's educational background is in both English and Library & Information Science. Her love of art and books led her to become a librarian by day and an artist by night. Now retired from the library, she devotes all of her time to being an artist and creating work from her home studio in Rock Hill, SC. She has exhibited and received notable recognition in a variety of juried exhibitions across the United States, and has shown her work in a number of solo exhibitions in Washington, DC, and throughout South Carolina.

The North Charleston City Gallery is situated in the common areas of the Charleston Area Convention Center, located in North Charleston. Parking and admission are free during regular Convention Center operating hours, 9am – 5pm daily. The gallery is staffed on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday only. citizens. This exhibition of Israel and Robbins shows how two photographers from different countries approach their subjects in similar, and complimentary ways."

College of Charleston Political Science Professor Mark Long has written a commissioned essay about the work of Yaakov Israel, and Duke University Professor of Documentary Studies Tom Rankin has written as essay about Kathleen Robbins'

Work by Yaakov Israel

The Quest for the Man on the White Donkey, by Yaakov Israel, consists of images taken all over the country of Israel. Inspired by the Orthodox Jewish tradition of the Messiah (the Prophet) who will arrive riding on a white donkey, this 10-year photographic project features portraits and landscapes highlighting Israel's diversity. This project is the result of Israel's search for a deeper understanding of his country and an attempt to relay his personal experiences on the Israeli reality with a broader sense of belonging to the global human collective.

Into the Flatland, by Kathleen Robbins, is a series of photographs documenting the land, people, and culture of the Mississippi Delta. The artist returned to her ancestral home as an adult in 2001 after completing graduate studies in New Mexico. She and her brother lived on the family farm for nearly two years, breathing life back into properties that had been long dormant.

Yaakov Israel was born in 1974 in Jerusalem, Israel, where he lives and works. He has a BFA from the Department of Photography at the Bezalel Academy of Arts and Design, Jerusalem. Since 2004 he has been teaching photography at art and photography schools and colleges in Israel including the Bezalel Academy.

His work has been the subject of solo and group shows which were exhibited in museums and galleries in Israel and internationally. Solo exhibition venues include: Centro de Arte Alcobendas; Czech Centre, Prague; Impressions Gallery, Bradford, England; Fifty One Fine Art Photography, Antwerp; Margaret Street Gallery, London; La Maison de la Photographie. Toulon; OSLO 8 Gallery, Basel; The Arhitecture House Gallery, Jaffa; The Open Museum of Photography, Tel-Hai; and the Haifa Museum of Art.

Israel was selected Winner of the PHotoEspaña Descubrimientos PHE12 Award, as one of the three winners of the Conscientious portfolio competition, and a Critical Mass finalist, Top 50 by Photolucida. His photographs are in the collections of The Knesset (Israel's house of parliament), Haifa Museum of Art, The Open Museum of Photography at Tel-Hai, and Ashdod Art Museum. His first monograph The Quest for the Man on the White Donkey was recently published by Schilt Publishing, Amsterdam. Israel is represented by Fifty One Fine Art Photography, Antwerp and Oslo 8 contemporary photography in Basel.

Israel's exhibition will travel nationally after its debut in Charleston, and is co-sponsored by the Consulate General of Israel with local support from the Yaschik/ Arnold Jewish Studies Program at the College of Charleston.

City of Charleston Office of Cultural Affairs in Charleston, SC, Features Works of African American Artists

The City of Charleston Office of Cultural Affairs in Charleston, SC, will present African Diaspora - Convergence and Reclamation, which will bring together a group of local African American artists, who will display their personal collections and examine their artistic practice through the lens of their cultural heritage. The exhibition, featuring works from Hampton R. Olfus, Jr., James Denmark, Winston Kennedy, Arianne King-Comer, and Addelle Sanders, will be on view at the City Gallery at Waterfront Park, from Sept. 6 through Oct. 5, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 6, from 5-7pm. In addition, the public is invited to attend artist lectures by the exhibiting artists and curator on Sunday, Sept. 28 at 2pm.

According to exhibition artist Winston Kennedy, "In a visual sense, some of [the exhibition artists] integrate the traditional African visual signs, symbols and images and others are able to weave formal issues of modernism of art creativity into the universal statements in our production of Western modernism. Therefore, our creative works range from: abstract to figurative abstraction; from realism to photorealism; from conceptual to other discrete modes of time and performance art. We reflect and reclaim an internal cultural gumbo - our studio production stretches across many modalities."

Curator Dr. Ade Ofunniyin adds, "While the artworks featured in the Convergence and Reclamation exhibition do not have as their aim the undoing of representations written and/or painted by twentieth century lowcountry artists, they intend to convey imagery connected to a transatlantic reclamation of Africa as source for renewal, inspiration and creative influences that can be utilized to propel, sustain, and add new meaning and/or significant cultural nuances to the visual imageries guiding our understanding of each other and the world, making life more meaningful for us all. The exhibit promises to cool and refresh the piece of earth that we tread upon and call Charleston.'

"Briggs v Elliott," by James Denmark

James Denmark earned his Master of Fine Arts Degree at the prestigious Pratt Institute of Fine Arts in New York. Denmark has a natural affinity for the difficult and largely improvisational medium of collage and quickly developed his own unique and easily identifiable style. With brightly handcolored papers, fabric and objects, Denmark creates compositions that go beyond the superficial and transitory and focuses, instead, on what is eternal and universal.

Winston Kennedy, an artist and scholar, is professor emeritus from Howard University, Washington, DC, and former professor at Claflin University in Orangeburg, SC. In addition to his work in theory and history, Kennedy maintains an active studio practice. His current studio production involves a series of woodcuts and paintings. These artworks imagine and image the movement African people in the geographical places of the Ancestral Stream - the African Diaspora. Current artworks visualize the movement of Africans from the island of Jamaica to the Lowcountry of South Carolina.

Arianne King Comer is a multi-talented artist specializing in batik using the traditional indigo dye process to create batik paintings, wearable art, and decorative items. She is a graduate of Howard University and has studied textiles at the graduate level at Detroit Center of Creative Studies and Cranbrook Art Academy. Comer worked as a certified art teacher in Michigan before pursuing art full time and studying the indigo dye process on a United Nations grant in Oshogbo, Nigeria in 1992. She was the director of the Ibile Indigo House at Penn Center until 2004 and she relocated to Charleston in 2006.

Born a Washingtonian, Hampton R. Olfus, Jr. creates works of art that are direct links to African, Native American and European styles. Olfus works in acrylics, pen and ink, pencil, watercolor, and mixed media; the pieces are very detailed and are, in many cases, reminiscent of fine sculpture. Art is an integral part of his life by way of expression, vision, education and communication. It reflects his formal training and personal studies. In the words of Olfus, "Let art be art, fresh and new, no egos or selfish wants, just the artist's pure spirit."

Addelle Sanders has been creating beautiful works of art that have captured the hearts of art lovers everywhere for over 12 years. Along with her partner Ron, Addelle co-founded Fiber Art by Rondelle and together the duo used rich palettes of

Charleston Artist Guild, SC, Offers Works by Ginny Versteegen

The Charleston Artist Guild in Charleston, SC, will present Sunrise... Sunset, a collection of new works by Ginny Versteegen, on view at the Guild Gallery, from Sept. 1 - 30, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 5, from 5-8pm.

For many the sunrise and sunset of the day hold spiritual connotations. This proves true for the artist, Ginny Versteegen. The elements of color, soft edges and drama of the landscape all come together in her latest series of paintings. Connect with the artist and nature as you view this new body of work.

From the muted colors of Spirit of South Carolina to the drama of Sunset on Shem Creek, Versteegen will unveil the majesty found in these quiet moments of the day. Her use of rich vibrant color gives the viewer a selective impression of a scene. Through the use of oil paint on linen and canvas she expresses her feelings about the subject and the time of day.

For further information check our SC Institutional Gallery listings or call the Guild at 843/722-2425.

The Andell Inn at Freshfields at Kiawah Island, SC, Features Works by Eva Carter and Rick Lazes

The Andell Inn at Freshfields at Kiawah Island, SC, will present The World is Bending, featuring paintings by Eva Carter and sculptures by Rick Lazes, on view from Sept. 4 - 30, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 4, from 6-8:30pm. September 4 - 30, 2014.

Rick Lazes and Eva Carter personify the title The World is Bending. Both are innovators in the world of art and stretching the boundaries of our world. Come by to meet these artists in person and to see their latest work at the Andell Inn.

Eva Carter is a resident of neighboring Wadmalaw Island and has established national acclaim for her work. She has been a fixture in the Charleston, SC, art scene for nearly 30 years. Her large abstract works in oil have been described as paintings drenched in color and brimming with movement and emotion.

A spiritual connection can be drawn between Carter's paintings and the ambiance of the natural environment. Although she doesn't paint the literal landscape, her inspiration is charged by the idyllic setting of her Wadmalaw Island studio where she watches the ebb and flow of intercoastal tides or a fading light on the watery horizon.

Carter studied art at East Tennessee State University. She has had her works shown at the Gibbes Museum of Art, Charleston, SC; South Carolina State Museum, Columbia, SC; and Carol Reece Museum, Johnson City, TN; as well as at the Blue Spiral 1 Gallery, Asheville, NC; Joyce Robins Gallery, Santa Fe, NM; and Marion Meyer Contemporary Art, Laguna Beach, CA.

Rick Lazes is a North Carolina sculptor who has been creating sculpture for three decades. He is currently working on two series: "The World Is Bending" which are created out of steam bent hardwoods and "Liquid Art" which are reverse painted on Plexiglas and then melted. While the two mediums are quite different the sensuous shapes are similar in their fluid elegance.

Lazes graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with a degree in architecture and sociology. He is an inventor and the holder of several patents for innovative environmental friendly technology including the Auto Boom<sup>TM</sup>, which is a state of the art technology employed to mitigate offshore oil spills.

Lazes has been a successful entrepreneur and his professional career includes his work in the entertainment industry where he has produced hundreds of concerts in 30 states, live music festivals and TV shows for HBO and Cinemax. Ampol, one of the companies that he started, was the largest contractor employed to clean up the massive BP oil spill a few years ago. Since that time Lazes has focused the majority of his time on his art.

The Wells Gallery at The Sanctuary on Kiawah Island, SC, Features Works by George Pate

The Wells Gallery at The Sanctuary on Kiawah Island, SC, will present a live painting event with George Pate, on Sept. 19 and 20, 2014, both days from 1-6pm. New works by the artist will also be on view

Pate was a resident of the Southeast since 1957, and Santa Fe, NM, since 1977, where he found ample subject matter in his imminently paintable landscape, filled with historical architecture and manifestations of distinctly different cultures. This intrigue motivated him to move to Beaufort, SC, and become a full time resident of the Lowcountry.

Work by George Pate

Using his Southwestern influenced color palette, Pate now embraces the light and colors that the Lowcountry has to offer. He works en plein air to render light, shade, and shadow with a strong design, vital color and thoughtful brush strokes.

Work by George Pate

Pate evokes both realism and impressionism in his canvases and consistently displays his understanding of the invention and the presence of emotion. He fully inhabits each landscape he paints, extracting the essence that resides in the soul of the land, and releasing its poetry onto the surface of his canvas.

Professional organizations have recognized Pate with shows, purchases, and awards, and his work is represented in both private and corporate collections. Pate is a member of the Salamagundi Club in New York, a Signature Member of Oil Painters of America (OPA), a member of Rocky Mountain Plein Air Painters (RM-PAP), and Watercolor West.

Lowcountry Artists Gallery in Charleston, SC, Offers Works by Rebecca Leonard

Lowcountry Artists Gallery in Charleston, SC, will present Troposhere, featuring intriguing pastel and acrylic landscape paintings by Rebecca Leonard, on view from Sept. 5 - 30, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 5, from 5-8pm.

The exhibition features Leonard's focus on capturing the beauty of the weather systems within our atmosphere. From still calm morning light to dramatic tornado scenes you will sense the intrigue the artist has experienced and recorded. A veteran painter, her approach to this exhibit was to use real images as a starting point.

No pure realism and no pure abstraction. Leonard stands in both camps. The artist then transforms the composition emphasizing line, shape, and color.

Finding the simplest form in nature and in our atmosphere has motivated Leonard to create this body of work. Our hope is that it will touch something inside of you

Edward Dare Gallery in Charleston, SC, Features Works by Sally Evans and James Ruby

The Edward Dare Gallery in Charleston, SC will present Dog Days Duet a two person show with Sally Evans and James Ruby, on view from Sept. 5 - 20, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 5, from Both James Ruby and Sally Evans are animal lovers to the core; their hearts are warmed by furry creatures of all kinds and in addition to gallery paintings, enjoy making pet portraiture a large part of their life's work. Ruby will be traveling here from Cincinnatti, OH, and Evans from Winterpark, FL; don't miss this rare opportunity to meet with these artists in the gallery and have them photograph your pet for a commission. Both artists have put together a beautiful show of pieces for this event that are ready to take home and hang on your wall. Collectors of Evan's colorful landscapes and coastal cottages will also be pleased with this show as several new pieces in this series will be face hardships as well. Here are a few great things that they do: So that pets can remain with their owners who may be facing financial hardships, CAS has a food bank for the elderly, people on assisted living, or people who've faced other sudden financial hardships. Toby's Fund is a program that pays for medical treatment for animals who come in needing medical attention in order to make them adoptable - or just to save their lives. They investigate and help prosecute animal abuse cases (in conjunction with the police), provide education in summer camps, for high school students considering vet medicine, and in public schools to teach animal care & respect.

Their numerous animal training classes are with a nationally certified team of staff members who work every day with animals that need training/socialization before going to the adoption floor. This is everything from "sit-down-shake" to those who come in terrified from life on the streets. These pets are shown what it is to be loved and have confidence, mak ing them "happy pets" again; and these pets show their appreciation ten-fold by becoming vital parts of our families. And finally adoptions; CAS has only a 7% euthanasia rate so far this year... statewide it's 38.7% and nationally it's 28%. Their adoption rate for the year is 61%...statewide it's 21.7%. Some of the donations that are needed are pet food, baby food, toys, towels, plastic bowls and cups, small plastic sandwich bags, peanut butter, block cheese, and small soft training treats. For a full list refer to (www. charlestonanimalsociety.org). Both Evans and Ruby work with animal charities extensively in their home states and were both very pleased to partner with the Charleston Animal Society for this to the mountain vistas of Arizona. In addition to landscapes, Evans loves animals and creates whimsical works inspired by dogs, cats, horses and any other creature that catches her fancy.

Evans' lithographs have appeared in television shows such as Nip/Tuck and the movie American Dreamz. As an added bonus to her collectors, Evans is about to become a household name - watch for her images soon to appear on various exciting consumer products at a retailer near you. Evans has signature memberships in The International Society of Acrylic Painters and The Degas Pastel Society.

James Ruby's signature style is created with meticulous brush strokes, as well as traditional layering techniques, to achieve richness and depth. The influence of Pop Art and contemporary realism is prevalent in Ruby's work, as he aims to create something more personally connecting and emotionally touching than a traditional painting of a canine. Each piece immediately strikes a chord with the viewer, sometimes humorous, and always heartwarming.

that occurred in his personal life, Ruby was motivated to step away from human figurative paintings and lift his spirits by painting an image that always brought a smile to his face - the adoring snout of his twelve year companion, Smooch. Discovering how others connected with that single painting was the catalyst to James' journey of capturing the emotional bond we have with human's best friend. Dealing with the loss of Smooch earlier this year was a difficult time for Ruby, but he is back to the easel and has just recently completed 19 portraits that have brought joy to numerous families and Ruby as well as he completed each piece.

Ruby's painting process was featured on the PBS series "Applause" in 2013 and his work has been featured in numerous publications such as The Houston Press, Dogster, and Dog Art Today who said, "Ruby's Pop-Realism inspired oil paintings capture the wet-nosed joy of high noon on a salty beach. I can almost smell these hot dogs". However, the best quote of all is from Ruby himself, "As I explore the emotional bond we share with our loyal companions, my vision is to capture an image that every pet owner can connect with – the face we see each morning as we lay in bed, while our best friend anxiously awaits to begin the day," says Ruby.

A Few Words From Down Under

Editor's Note: Judith McGrath contributed her writings about exhibits and events taking place in Western Australia to Carolina Arts for about a decade. Although she was writing about events taking place thousands and thousands of miles away, they seemed relevant to what was going on here in the Carolinas. Her contributions were very popular when we first ran them and continue to be popular on our website's archives. We've decide to revisit them from time to time.

A Few Words From Down Under Classical vs. Contemporary by Judith McGrath, first run in our June January Issue 2007

Got tired of singing the same ol' tune, you know the one, "where have all the artists gone?" It was depressing so I went on a Roman Holiday to lift my spirits! Unlike that skinny waif of an actress in the old movie, I didn't find a tall, dark and handsome man (wasn't looking) but did find beautiful art.

My return to the Land Down Under was just in time to catch the end of year continued above on next column to the right my tune. I now chant "where will all the artists come from?"

Contemporary artists in Italy are surrounded by ancient art that involves ideal

I was ready to address their efforts with a new insight. The result had me changing rounded by ancient art that involves ideal proportions of the figure and integrated decoration on architecture. This classicism seeps into the subconscious. It is the language of art and, like proper grammar, is employed when communicating via the visual medium, even in modern times. Italian art schools demand students spend hours of drawing, from life and art, to learn the visual voice that expresses their ideas.

Although Australia and the United States have a long history of Indigenous culture, we both count our Nations' Birthdays from the time of European settlement (US got the Pilgrims and Pioneers about a century before Australia got the Prisoners). As our nations grew with the arrival of new migrants, we based our respective "cultures" on an amalgamation of various foreign heritages. What both our relatively "new" nations lack is a long, singular line of artistic tradition, one that can be documented back to antiquity. And that could be the problem with my (and perhaps your) town's art today.

When in Rome I did what Romans do; visited commercial galleries and conversed with practicing artists in their studios. The language barrier was breached by the well-made art works. Some artists were sculptors, others painters, some works were abstract, others figurative, some innovative, others traditional, all revealed respect for the subject, medium and viewer.

When I came home I set out, refreshed and ready, to meet the local art scene head on and appreciate it anew. After attending a few exhibitions I realized what was wrong. It seems the lack of "classical" tradition has penalized the descendents of this penal colony as waves of migrants, in an effort to fit into a new culture, divested themselves of their past heritage, condemning our cultural future to hard labour.

I would venture to say the same for the US as various waves of immigrants sought new lives there.

As a result, there is no definitive reference for our current art students, no benchmark to refer to as they try to advance artistically. The problem of lacking a "past perfect" as a measuring device is exacerbated by a generation of art teachers who were nurtured in the "conceptual" art movement. They may be able to think and talk and write about art very well but they can't paint a picture or draw a conclusion on what constitutes a work of good art.

When it comes to figure drawing, art students today are not taught there is a skeletal framework that supports a network of muscles which will constrict or stretch accordingly in different poses. Students rarely draw from life models or cadavers, more's the pity! When set a still life subject, emphasis is put on expressing how one feels about, or relates to, the object rather then how to re-present it in paint, pencil, clay or stone. They can not ranslate what they see into a work of because basic colour theory and design principles have been superseded by technology. I've had more than one student justify poor drawing skills as "expressive" or a splotch of vomit green as reference to his distaste for the subject, a plate of

If we transfer this modern approach to visual arts to contemporary writing, then I should be allowed to type this commentary with my fingers on the wrong keys, because sometimes that's just how I feel about contemporary art. If I were permitted to do so, you wouldn't understand what I have to say, just like I can't comprehend what these modern art graduates are trying to tell the world. Sometimes I think they're saying; O s, sm styody O jsbr s [orvr pg [s[rt yjsy dsud dp. (See *below.)

Take me back to Ancient Rome. They had running water and some really good contemporary art in those days.

Francis Marion University in Florence, SC, Features Works by Adrian Rhodes

Francis Marion University in Florence, SC, is presenting Bits and Pieces - New Works by Adrian Rhodes, on view in the Hyman Fine Arts Center Gallery, through Sept. 16, 2014.

Rhodes is a native of Hartsville, SC. She earned her BFA from Winthrop University, and during her undergraduate studies she spent a semester studying fine art in Imatra, Finland. She completed her MFA in painting and printmaking from Winthrop University and is currently teaching at Wingate University.

"I am interested in studio practice as a way to question - I am interested in the act of making," says Rhodes. "I don't try to illustrate an idea, rather I let process guide the piece and find its meaning in the method used to create it. Printmaking is an important part of my process. I create editions, and pull additional prints from the matrix that I deconstruct and use as college material in my mixed media pieces. This leads to recurring imagery across my work that becomes part of my personal iconography, and the meaning I find in these different images helps me to determine the meaning of the larger works."

"I like paper, texture, and color," continues Rhodes. "I take cast off things and collage them into my work: onion bags, bits of string, and the mylar press bed covers marked by ink and registration marks. I pick up feathers, dead moths, bees, and scraps of books. Nothing is sacred, and nothing is trash. A "finished" piece might be deconstructed into components for many other paintings, or I might sweep up the studio floor and make a collage of whatever I find. Including these random bits of life in the work blurs the line between studio and sidewalk."

"My finished work reflects the enjoyment in manipulating materials: drawn mark making, paint manipulations, printmaking processes, collage and transfer techniques. I find the tension between rigid structural forms and organic, intuitive mark making reflects internal conflict. This tension explores a desire to control life, counterpoised against the futility of that effort. It is recognizing the correlations between my studio and the world outside that allows me to create work which reflects the meaning inherent in the search."

Work by Adrian Rhodes

Offers Works by Anelecia Hannah Coker College in Hartsville, SC, is presenting Broken Things, featuring paintings by Anelecia Hannah, on view at the Cecila Coker Bell Gallery, through Sept.

Originally from Kent, WA, Hannah currently lives and paints on the coast of North Carolina and in the grey light of the Pacific Northwest. The painter received her BA at Seattle Pacific University in Washington and studied concurrently in Florence, Italy.

Hannah paints life around her with a mind both for realism and for allegory. Her paintings are meditations filled with symbol-laden objects and persons. With her searching eye for beauty and meaning, the painter finds rare subtleties found in the wholeness discovered with the crucial passing of time.

"By lineage, I am part of the White Earth tribe of Ojibwe. I have been reading the old stories and myths of the culture. and am struck by the way my ancestors have ascribed meaning to dreams and images, and specific talismans. If an image came to someone in a dream, they would often paint it with dirt and oil onto stone, creating permanent symbols, which continue to exist after centuries. I have learned to paint in a formal, classical tradition - but I am still mixing oil and dirt to paint symbols, spiritual icons. These paintings feel to me like ebenezers - still monuments to times of transition," says Hannah.

The Cecelia Coker Bell Gallery is located on the Coker College Campus in the Gladys C. Fort Art Building.

Jones-Carter Gallery in Lake City, SC, Features Works by Francisco de Goya

Francisco Goya's Los Caprichos etchings, one of the most influential graphic series in the history of Western art, will be presented at the Jones-Carter Gallery in Lake City, SC, from Saturday, Sept. 20, 2014 through Saturday, Jan. 3, 2015.

This exhibition features a superb first edition of the complete set of 80 etchings, which by tradition was one of the four sets acquired directly from Goya in 1799 by the duke of Osuna. It then came into the hands of Pedro Fernández Durán, of the house of the marquis of Perales, the greatest Spanish collector of the 19th century and a major donor to the Prado. His collector's mark appears on all 80 prints of this set. The exhibition includes an essay contributed by Robert Flynn Johnson, Curator in Charge, Achenbach Foundation for Graphic Arts, Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco.

Other works by Goya are also included in the exhibition for instructive comparison including a few later edition prints from Los Caprichos and examples from each of Goya's other major graphic series: Los Desastres de la Guerra, Los Proverbios, and La Tauromaquia; and his early etchings after Velasquez. Additionally, to demonstrate the broad influence of Los Caprichos, the exhibition includes a 1920's drawing after Los Caprichos plate 51, "Se Repulen," by Edward Hagedorn, as well as eight etchings by contemporary artist, Enrique Chagoya, entitled, "Return to the Caprichos."

In his original essay for the exhibition, Robert Flynn Johnson takes a fresh approach to Los Caprichos. Johnson has also undertaken an enlightening comparison between three contemporary interpretive manuscripts on the etchings—the "Prado," the "Ayala," and the "Madrid Biblioteca Nacional," adding his own illuminating observations to each of the eighty plates. Additionally, Johnson 'fast-forwards' from Goya's major opus to contemporary relevance in the work of two artists working in the 20th century-Edward Hagedorn and Enrique Chagoya.

Enigmatic and controversial, Goya's Los Caprichos were published in 1799 at a time of social repression and economic crisis in Spain. Influenced by Enlightenment thinking, the painter set out to analyze the human condition and denounce social abuses and superstitions. Los Caprichos was his passionate declaration that the chains of social backwardness had to be broken if humanity was to advance. The series attests to the artist's political liberalism and his revulsion towards ignorance and intellectual oppression; at the same time it mirrors Goya's ambivalence toward authority and the church.

Francis Marion University in Florence, SC, Features Works by Bethany Luhman & Cone 10 Studios

Francis Marion University in Florence, SC, will present two new exhibits including: World Consumerism, featuring photography by Bethany Luhman and Lowcountry Clay Sampler, featuring works by members of Cone 10 Studios, on view in the Hyman Fine Arts Center Gallery, from Sept. 19 through Nov. 6, 2014.

Bethany Luhman was born in 1987 in Red Bank, NJ, but spent most of her life in South Carolina. She graduated from Francis Marion University with a Photography degree in December 2010. She went on to Graduate school at Savannah College of Art and Design, which she is expected to graduate with her second Masters in Photography degree this fall. Luhman tends to create abstract images that alter the reality and question what the viewer is looking at. Her art subjects tend to be about issues that are happening in the world and the power of story that shapes our relationship with the much of our lives we surrender in return for some object we barely want, occasionally need, buy only because it was put before us," says Luhman. "This is understandable given the workings of our society where without a job we succumb, where if we don't want a job and are happy getting by we are then labeled irresponsible and noncontributing by society. He also wrote that if we hire a fleet of bulldozers and tear up half the countryside to build some monstrous factory, casino or mall, we are called entrepreneurs, job-creators, and stalwarts of the continued on Page 14 community. Perhaps we should all be shut away on some planet for the insane. Then again, maybe that is where we are."

"The effect of consumerism starts at an early age. Children while watching their favorite cartoons are also exposed to commercials showing images of toys and sugary cereals to entice children to want. However, those toys and sugary sweets are soon left in the cabinet or in the corner of a room, and then it's on to the next item. Those children grow up knowing no better, unaware of the trap. Adults are faced with consumerist items every day, all day, with billboards, magazine advertisements, commercials, and even displays in windows as they walk down the street to work," says Luhman.

"Each image is made up of many found photographs sourced from the internet.," adds Luhman. "The found images represent a single, amateur view of the locale. They are presented in color, but lack clarity and focus, a suggestion of the fleeting pleasure and subsequent disillusionment of consumption."

Originally founded by Susan Filley as ClayWorks in 2000, in Charleston, SC, the current owners of the renamed, Cone 10 Studios, are Fiorenzo Berardozzi, Anne John and Susan Gregory. This is their third and largest space. Cone 10 Studios moved to the upper peninsula area of Charleston, in June of 2010. The concept has always been to house a group of ceramicists sharing in the firing, finances and joy of a large gasreduction kiln.

NORTH CAROLINA POTTERY CENTER

Greenhill in Greensboro, NC, Offers an Exhibition Focused on Drawing

Greenhill in Greensboro, NC, will present Following Threads: Fiber Art and Drawing, curated by Edie Carpenter, on view from Sept. 19 through Nov. 9, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 19, from 5:30-8:30pm. Carpenter will give a talk between 5:30 and 6:30pm.

Following Threads highlights four artists, Harriet Hoover, Becky Joye, Leigh Suggs, and Jason Watson, who investigate the drawn and stitched line in figurative and abstract works that stretch the definitions of drawing. Hoover, Joye, Suggs and Watson all have artistic practices that embrace several mediums, producing studio drawings as well as works utilizing fiber, collage, hand and machine sewing, and installation. Thematic threads link their graphic and fiber work as well as their multidisciplinary approaches which explore personal narrative spaces.

Line, Touch, Trace, an exhibition presenting 13 North Carolina artists focusing on draftsmanship curated by Edie Carpenter, was developed concurrently with Following Threads and is on view at the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh, NC, through Mar. 4, 2015.

Harriet Hoover's works combining several media are informed by the artist's desire "to uncover stories of a place and its history." In Following Threads Hoover associates drawing and collage in a new group of works that may be viewed from two sides, including large-scale floor to ceiling collages. Hoover's assemblages, like her 2-D works, are composed from found materials and often bear the names of the places where the artist gathered them. These cast-off remnants are "manipulated, stitched and bound" by the artist in free-standing sculptural pieces that possess a strong material presence and poetic resonance.

Greensboro-based Hoover has attended the Penland School of Crafts and studied landscape architecture at The Academy of Fine Arts in Prague. She holds a bachelor's degree in textile technology and fiber arts focus from NC State University and a MFA from UNC-Greensboro. She currently teaches at NC A & T State University. Recent exhibition venues include LIGHT, Art and Design in Chapel Hill, NC, Art in Odd Places in Greensboro, and the Weatherspoon Art Museum in Greensboro.

Becky Joye, "Lantern", 2010, acrylic and pencil on paper, 30 x 22 inches ©Becky Joye, Courtesy Greenhill

Becky Joye's acrylic and pencil drawings on paper depict imaginary structures resembling farm silos, communication towers, or fairgrounds. Nostalgic machine-age constructions are depicted with precisionist line. Ductwork and pylons are often festooned with floating kite-like appendages in bright colors evoking aerial circuses and dreams of flight.

At Greenhill Joye will present a new group of larger drawings on paper inspired by "industrial winding towers and vintage toys" from a recent trip to Germany. These works on paper will be seen in association with the artist's machine-sewn fabric collages in vivid patterns and new three-dimensional works.

Charlotte, NC, native Joye graduated

Leigh Suggs, "Luminate", 2012, archival gel ink and acrylic on paper, 22 x 22 inches ©Peter Geoffrion, Courtesy Greenhill from the UNC-Charlotte with a Bachelor of Architecture in 2003. She is currently a member artist at Artspace in Raleigh after being a Regional Emerging Artistin-Residence in 2013. She recently was in the exhibition Thought Maps & Ladders at Artspace.

Joye's work has been featured in numerous exhibitions, including The Drawing Show, Pump Project, Austin, TX; a solo exhibition at Designbox, Raleigh; Unraveled at the Block Gallery in Raleigh and Contemporary South at the Visual Arts Exchange in Raleigh. She was a 2014 Artfields finalist, in Lake City, SC.

Leigh Suggs produces painstakingly crafted works involving "the use of singular pattern producing gestures such as weaving, wrapping, stitching, and adhering." Ink pen line drawings in geometric patterns form polyhedrons and subtle variations in the flow of ink create pulsating effects of light line against a dark ground.

In some of Suggs' most well-known works, hundreds of petal shaped paper elements of are stitched in concentric circles, overlapping petals varying in opacity and density forming large circular wall constructions. Seen together Suggs' works reveal a practice both precise and obsessive, in which light as much as line is enlisted by the artist to produce subtle shifts in reading and evoke organic as well as celestial metaphors.

Suggs is currently an MFA candidate at Virginia Commonwealth University and holds a BFA from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is a recent recipient of the NC Arts Council Fellowship Grant and has shown her work at LIGHT, Art and Design in Raleigh, NC, the Weatherspoon Museum, and the Contemporary Art Museum in Raleigh.

Jason Watson is a mixed-media artist, whose work combines interests in the figure, found objects, and text fragments as visual material. Watson's drawings and collages are visual assemblages of remnants of our collective cultural past. Starting with historic statues and portrait busts sketched in museums or at historical monuments, his works serve as storybooklike illustrations providing a pictorial space for various cultural artifacts to inhabit. The artist's interest in the object is pushed to the extreme in new works combining drawing, stitching and assemblage.

Watson has exhibited in galleries, universities and non-profit spaces including in Drawing Revisited at Greenhill in 2010 and Jason Watson: A Second Look, at the Jersey City Museum in 2007-2008. Watson recently completed an artist residency at the McColl Center for Visual Art in Charlotte, NC, where he was the Wesley Mancini Artist in Residence for 2013.

An Artist Talk will be offered on Wednesday, Oct. 15, 2014, from 5:30-7-pm - Presentations by Leigh Suggs and Jason Watson where they will discuss the themes, intentions, and material processes employed in their artworks.

An Artist Talk will be offered on Wednesday, Oct. 29, 2014, from 5:30-7-pm - Presentations by Harriet Hoover and Becky Joye where they will discuss the themes, intentions, and material processes employed in their artworks.

Greenhill in Greensboro, NC

University of North Carolina at Greensboro, NC, Offers 43rd Exhibition of Works on Paper

The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, in Greensboro, SC, will present Art on Paper 2014: The 43rd Exhibition, on view at the Weatherspoon Art Museum, from Sept. 27 through Dec. 14, 2014. A ticketed preview party is planned for Sept. 27, from 6-9pm.

Thirty-four regional, national and international artists have been chosen to present unique works using paper as their primary medium. A full list of participating artists appears at the end of this release.

Organized by Curator of Exhibitions Xandra Eden, Art on Paper 2014 will be presented in the Weatherspoon's main McDowell Gallery. Various curators throughout the years have approached the Art on Paper exhibitions in different ways. This year, Eden chose to select fewer artists than in the past so that audiences would have the opportunity to get a more indepth understanding of each artist's work. Artists were selected through a submissions process and by invitation.

Since 1965, the Weatherspoon's Art on Paper exhibition has charted a history of contemporary art through outstanding works on paper. Through the ongoing commitment of xpedx (formerly the Dillard Paper Company) and The Dillard Fund, the Weatherspoon has been able to acquire works from each Art on Paper exhibition for the Dillard Collection, which today numbers nearly 600 works. Acquisitions have included work by some of art's seminal practitioners, such as Eva Hesse, Frank Stella, and Louise Bourgeois.

Support for the exhibition and catalogue is generously provided by the F.M. Kirby Foundation, Inc. Special thanks to UNCG MFA Graduate Assistant, Stacy Bloom Rexrode and Curatorial Intern Lee Summerell for their help with the exhibition

Artists included in Art on Paper 2014 are: Miguel A. Aragon (Brooklyn, NY), Joell Baxter (Brooklyn, NY), Nancy Blum (Hoboken, NJ), Sandra Cinto (Sao Paulo, Brazil), Susan Collis (London, UK), Lucy Fradkin (Staten Island, NY), Ewan Gibbs (Oxfordshire, UK), Laura Tanner Gra-

University of North Carolina at Greensboro, SC, Features Works by Falk Visiting Artist Lesley Dill

The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, in Greensboro, SC, will present Lesley Dill: Faith & The Devil, a Falk Visiting Artist exhibition, on view at the Weatherspoon Art Museum, from Sept. 13 through Dec. 7, 2014.

Working in sculpture, drawing, photography, and performance, Lesley Dill uses a variety of media to explore themes of language, the body, and transformational experience. Her large-scale installation, Faith & The Devil, investigates the philosophical and existential conundrums of evil and underlying faith in the world.

The source and lynchpin for this investigation is Big Gal Faith, an eight-foot tall female figure whose wild hair of words and lavish twenty-six foot wide dress of drawn images and texts express themes of cruelty, violence, lust, forgiveness, reflection, and transcendence. Big Gal Faith is accompanied by an androgynous figure representing Lucifer, who has words of hate on his front and words of joy on his back. The project is a walk through a person's mind – encompassing a world in which unfathomable actions co-exist with times of reflection and illumination.

Dill received her BA from Trinity College in 1972 and MFA from the Maryland Institute of Art in 1980. Her work has been widely exhibited and can be found in the collections of the Weatherspoon Art Museum, the Albright Knox Art Gallery, the Cleveland Museum of Art, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art, among many others.

Hundreds of people from all across North Carolina and neighboring states gather in the tiny town of Star each year on the first Saturday in October for the STARworks Glass Pumpkin Patch.

At 10am sharp, the ropes are cut and people pour onto the front lawn at STARworks to find the perfect hand-blown glass pumpkin to complement their homes, give as a gift or add to their collections. Some people arrive early to take advantage of the local farmers market that sets up in the parking lot.

Pumpkins of all sizes, shapes and color combinations are arranged on hay bales, in the grass or surrounding trees. The effect is reminiscent of an Easter egg hunt.

"I was so impressed by all of the pumpkins," said Mary Lou Neumann, a 2013 Pumpkin Patch shopper from Corolla, NC. "It was really worth the trip from the Outer Banks."

The STARworks Glass team is comprised of Joe Grant, Tom Zogas, George Dielman and Michael Migliorini, who work in teams of two to create each pumpkin.

In the past, the Pumpkin Patch focused solely on pumpkins, however this year STARworks will introduce a limited selection of hand-blown gourds to go along with the pumpkins. Each gourd is created in a process similar to that of a pumpkin, with one glassblower creating the body and the other working on the stem, attaching the two and curling the stem for the final step.

The popularity of the Pumpkin Patch has STARworks increasing production numbers each year to try to keep up with growing demand.

"We're increasing production from 1,500 to about 2,000 pumpkins and gourds this year," said Central Park NC executive director Nancy Gottovi. "In past years, most of the pumpkins are gone within two hours. We recommend people arrive as close to 10am as possible to ensure a good selection.'

If any pumpkins remain after the event, they may be purchased during regular business hours. In the event of rain, the event will be held indoors at STARworks. The Pumpkin Patch is STARworks' most popular fundraising event. STARworks is a project of Central Park NC, a non-profit organization dedicated to improving the local economy by focusing on the cultural arts and natural resources of central North STARworks has a glass studio, a ceramics facility and a metal studio. They offer classes and workshops in each medium, high school glassblowing programs and hold several fun and educational events throughout the year. The STARworks building also acts as an incubator for small creative businesses, including Wet Dog Glass, an equipment fabricator for glass artists and craftspeople, Blankenship Business Solutions, and echo3, a graphic design studio.

STARworks is located just off I-73/74 in northern Montgomery County. The address is 100 Russell Drive in Star, the geographical center of North Carolina.

Artworks Gallery in Winston-Salem, NC, Features Works by Alix Hitchcock and Kimberly Varnadoe

Artworks Gallery in Winston-Salem, NC, will present two new exhibits including: Flying, Swimming, Landing, featuring gelatin monotypes using imagery of birds and water creatures by Alix Hitchcock, and Somebody's Memories, featuring works by Kimberly Varnadoe using photography based imagery invoking memories and nostalgia. The exhibits will be on view from Sept. 28 through Nov. 1, 2014. Receptions will be held on Oct. 3, from 7-10pm and Oct. 19, from 2-4pm.

Alix Hitchcock's current colorful art on paper works are gelatin monotype prints with the themes of water, land, and air using silhouette shapes of dancers, acrobats, birds, sea animals, dragonflies, herons, etc. They are created by printing on handmade "gelatin plates" using cutout shapes as stencils with water-based printmaking inks, some with additional hand coloring. Hitchcock wants to communicate with the viewer a sense of awe in the presence of Nature, and bring the viewer into each artwork's world of movement and mystery.

Hitchcock received her MA in painting from New York University in 1983, and her BFA in printmaking and painting from the UNC at Greensboro in 1973. She was Drawing, Eighth Edition by David Faber, (Thomson Wadsworth), and Digital Art, Its Art and Science by Yue-Ling Wong, (Prentice Hall).

Kimberly Varnadoe works with experimental photography, including Polaroid emulsion lifts, acrylic gel medium transfers, film and digital processes with a variety of mixed media techniques. Her imagery is inspired by the nostalgic theme of times past, lost and abandoned spaces, and fleeting memories. Varnadoe begins with images of places and events that evoke sentimental, nostalgic thoughts and builds on these personal experiences in order to share these memories with her audience. She says "I am fascinated how each person can experience the same event or place, yet remember it quite differently."

Varnadoe received her BFA in Painting from the University of South Alabama and her MFA in Printmaking from the University of Memphis. She has been teaching college since 1986 and is currently Associate Professor of Art and Chair of the Art Department at Salem College in Winston-Salem. Varnadoe has exhibited extensively in the region and was invited and participated in her first international exhibition in Shanghai, China in the spring of 2012. During the summer of 2012 she traveled to Lviv, Ukraine and conducted a Polaroid Emulsion Lift workshop to a group of artists at the 5 x 5 Gallery. ### NC, Offers Hispanic Arts Initiative NC, Features Exhibit of Bicycle Art

The Delta Arts Center in Winston-Salem, NC, with the Hispanic Arts Initiative will present Punto de Vista, Latino Perspectives III, the third annual art exhibit, on view from Sept. 5 through Oct. 25, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 5, from 6-8pm.

The Hispanic Arts Initiative is a funded partner of The Arts Council of Winston-Salem and Forsyth County and receives grants in both Operational Support and Arts in Education categories. María H. Sánchez-Boudy, the Initiative's Executive Director, said that the organization made the decision to create a "high-visibility signature event series" that would have broad community cultural impact and bring together diverse audiences. "We launched Punto de Vista - Latino Perspectives (A Cultural Journey Through Art) to build bridges of cross cultural understanding that would enrich the lives of both Latino and non-Latino populations in our community," she said. "We are delighted that this is a collaborative effort with Delta Fine Arts which is so respected here in Winston-Salem and shares our desire for cultural interaction and understanding."

Visual art for Latino Perspectives III will be selected by an Hispanic Arts Initiative panel and include works by Latino artists from across the state of North Carolina. It will feature non-representational works as well as art devoted to traditional Latino themes and painting techniques.

'The diversity of work being created by Latino artists among us is amazing," said Sanchez-Boudy, "and reflects the

Artworks Gallery in Winston-Salem, NC, Features Works by Nancy Hayes and Mike Foley

Artworks Gallery in Winston-Salem, NC, is presenting Me and Thee, featuring works by Nancy Hayes and Vivid Message: The Commercial Art of Mike Foley, on view through Sept. 27, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 5, from 7-10pm.

Recently a friend commented to the artist, Nancy Hayes, that they had not seen each other in a while. She explained that for reasons unknown to her, she turned the phrase over in her mind as it echoed through many possible ways in which long time acquaintances see each other over time. Intrigued by this comment, Hayes was further motivated to consider her longstanding interest in the self-portrait as a means of seeing "the self" and changes over time.

Work by Nancy Hayes

The outcome is presented as part of a show at Artworks Gallery during the month of September, 2014. Not wanting to be too serious, however, Hayes balances the introspective with a lighthearted exploration of portraits of the animal kingdom as she has many times. The works in this exhibit focuses on the farm.

Hayes has a BA in English from the University of Georgia and a BFA in art education from the University of North Carolina, Greensboro.

For business and industry or for anybody who has ever needed to sell anything, Mike Foley's new exhibit, Vivid Message, shows you how to do it with art.

Foley says, "The beauty is, there's more than one way to shave a possum... No matter how tight your deadline or how limited your budget, there's always an opportunity to create great original work." From a cardboard sign announcing a yard sale to a prize-winning film for Wake Forest's Business School, Foley's exhibit features his latest work plus favorite projects since landing in Winston-Salem to work at LHC / Mullen nearly 20 years ago.

Foley is a brand-selling, storytelling graphic artist and filmmaker. As a writer and creative director, he's worked in advertising agencies from LA to NY and created campaigns for Disney, NASCAR, Head & Shoulders, Old Spice, Taco Bell, Miller Brewing Company, Virgin Drinks, RJ Reynolds and Hanes with Michael Jordan. He works with companies to create short films and webisodes that merge both narrative and documentary styles of filmmaking.

Foley is married to Jennifer and is raising two art critics, Jack and Ella Minnow

High Point University in High Point, NC, to Kick Off 'Year of the Arts' with Fall Festival - Sept. 13, 2014

High Point University in High Point, NC, will kick off its eight-month celebration of the arts with the outdoor Fall Festival from 10am to 4pm, on Saturday, Sept. 13, 2014, in the parking lot behind Norton Hall on campus. The event will feature artists, exhibitors, demonstrations, live music and food. The family-friendly Fall Festival is free and open to the public.

Rain or shine, more than 30 exhibitors of quilters, painters, photographers, jewelers, bookbinders, engineers with robots and more will engage the community to celebrate the spirit of art in all forms. Below are a few exhibitors that will be offering demonstrations - some interactive – for visitors:

- · At the Shopbot demonstration, visitors will have an opportunity to watch their computer-created designs come to life with a ShopBot Desktop or Handibot CNC machine using Computer-Aided-Design (CAD) and Computer-Aided-Mancturing (CAM) software
- · Opobotics and First Appalachian Robotics will allow visitors to program, drive and control multiple robots.
- · Lazy Lizard Pottery will offer demonstrations on a pottery wheel.
- · Art from the Heart, which creates finely detailed animals out of locally grown gourds and clay, will demonstrate gourd sculpting and painting.
- · HPU student Mackenzie Allred, who runs Printology Letterpress, will demonstrate letterpress printing using a table top press, in addition to offering various printed items for sale.
- · HPU student David Friedman will demonstrate the art of origami folding.
- · Mamafrica Designs, a non-profit organization based out of Bukavu in the Democratic Republic of Congo, will offer for sale fair-trade clothing apparel, bags, accessories and home décor items created by female artisans in Democratic Republic

The Fall Festival is also presented in conjunction with HPU's annual Founder's Day celebrations. This year celebrates the 90th anniversary of the founding of the university.

"The Fall Festival is a celebration of the creative mind," says Dr. John Turpin, dean of the school of art and design. "From expressions of fine art to technological advancements that move our society forward, creative thinking is the driving force of the 21st century. We want to expose both the local and HPU community to this important trait that we all possess, and when nurtured, the possibilities it can create."

Entertainment will be provided by HPU's a cappella groups (Petal Points, Toccatatones and The Offbeats) and a jazz ensemble. Food trucks will be on site to purchase lunch and snack items. A kid-friendly zone will offer children of all ages opportunities to engage in art projects and set their minds free with Legos.

Visitors are encouraged to enter campus through the main welcome center off of North College Drive. Public parking will be available behind Congdon Hall.

At High Point University, every student receives an extraordinary education in an inspiring environment with caring people. HPU, located in the Piedmont Triad region of North Carolina, is a liberal arts institution with over 4,200 undergraduate and graduate students. It is ranked No.1 by US News and World Report in three categories: No. 1 - Best Regional College in the South; No. 1 - Up and Coming School in Regional Colleges in the South; and No. 1 - for A Strong Commitment to Undergraduate Teaching in Regional Colleges in the South. HPU was named this year the No. 4 private school in NC for the best return on investment, and it is a 2014-2015 College of Distinction. The university offers 44 undergraduate majors, 43 undergraduate minors and 11 graduate degree programs. Visit High Point University on the Web at (www.highpoint.edu).

Asheville Art Museum in Asheville Offers Work by Adrianne Wortzel

The Asheville Art Museum in Asheville, NC, will present Humans and Machines: The Robotic Worlds of Adrianne Wortzel, on view in the New Media Gallery, from Sept. 2 through Jan. 2015. Wortzel will offer a lecture on Sept. 24, from 6-7:30pm.

Adrianne Wortzel utilizes computer software, robotics, video and fictive narratives to create robotic worlds filled with humanlike creatures, historical references and scientific data. She works with contributions from researchers, scientists and robotic experts from across the globe to examine the relationship between humans and machines through art. Featured in the New Media Gallery are two of her short films entitled The Veils of Transference and archipelago.ch.

The Veils of Transference depicts a dialogue between a robot and human in a psychoanalytic therapy session, where the lines between their roles as analyst and analysand become blurred. The video evidences a human's desire to be robotic and a robot's programmed desire to be human. The session is set in a green-screen environment that displays the accompanying dreams and unconscious narratives and the human's mind and the robot's database. Each of the characters seemingly longs for the role of the other; each has a sense of their own history. Together they ponder the thin line between "memory" and "database."

archipelago.ch depicts a tour of a newly discovered series of AI robotic research labs as "islands" and iterates the discovery, analysis and interpretation of their terrain and their robots as indigenous creatures. The idiosyncratic robots are evolved by each researcher from their choice of morphologies occurring in nature, i.e., an insect eye, mouse whiskers discerning textures by touch, etc. The lab terrains are strewn with the tools and detritus of each researcher's endeavors, which are treated as flora. The voice-over tour of this archipelago is by Charles Darwin from Chapter 17 of the Voyage of the Beagle-Galapagos. archipelago.ch was initiated during Wortzel's 2004 Swiss-Artists-In-Labs Award: Residency at Artificial Intelligence Laboratory, University of Zurich, Switzerland. The world premiere was March 9, 2013 at ROBOTS ON TOUR, World Congress and Exhibition of Robots, Still from archipelago.ch, Haptic Mouse, robot with real whiskers. Researchers Dr. Miriam Fend and Dr. Simon Bovet, Artificial Intelligence Laboratory, University of Zurich, Switzerland.

Humanoids, Cyborgs and more, Zurich, Switzerland.

Wortzel received her Bachelor of Arts in Fine Arts from Brooklyn College of the City University of New York and a Master of Fine Arts in Computer Art from the School of Visual Arts in New York. She has received numerous grants, honors and residencies, as well as opportunities to speak and teach throughout her career. She has been published both as a writer and artist and has been exhibited in numerous collections, exhibitions and reviews. Wortzel is currently a Professor of Entertainment Technology and Emerging Media Technologies at New York City College of Technology, the senior technical college in the City University of New York (CUNY) system. She serves on the doctoral faculty of the Interactive Technology and Pedagogy Certificate Program at the CUNY Graduate Center. Wortzel is the Founding Director of StudioBlueLab, a robotics and theater laboratory initiated during her tenure as an Adjunct Professor of Mechanical Engineering at The Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art. StudioBlueLab now resides at New York City College of Technology.

Each film is about 25 minutes long and will be screened in a loop every other day.

Asheville Art Museum in Asheville Features Works by Mary Frank

The Asheville Art Museum in Asheville, NC, will present Mary Frank: Finding My Way Home, on view in the Appleby Memorial Foundation Gallery, from Sept. 26 through Jan. 18, 2015.

Over the course of her career, Mary Frank has worked in sculpture, painting, drawing, printmaking and recently encaustic and photography, suggesting that her primary loyalty is not to a particular way of working or to any medium, but rather to the power of direct expression and to the act of creation itself. All of this work evinces an eagerness to use the intuitions and improvisations that arise naturally during the creative process. The Museum is pleased to present a broad survey of Frank's work from across her long and accomplished career.

Frank was born in London, England, in 1933 and moved to the United States at the age of seven. In the early 1950s she began carving wood sculpture, and briefly studied with Hans Hoffman and Max Beckmann, In 1969, she worked on large multi-part, figurative clay sculptures, drawings and monoprints, which remained the major focus of her work throughout the 1970s and '80s. In the 1990s, she turned to painting as her primary medium.

Frank has been the subject of numerous solo museum and gallery exhibitions over the years, including a retrospective exhibition of sculpture, prints and drawings organized by the Neuberger Museum in Purchase, NY in 1978. Her work is in the permanent collections of the above institutions and other museums, including the Art Institute of Chicago, the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, the Jewish Museum, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, the Museum of Modern Art, the National Museum of American Art, the Newark Museum, the Whitney Museum of American Art and Yale University Art Gallery.

Asheville Art Museum in Asheville Features Work by Sol LeWitt

The Asheville Art Museum in downtown Asheville, NC, is pleased to present a unique and exciting ongoing exhibition, Sol LeWitt: Creating Place, Wall Drawing

Sol LeWitt (1928-2007) was born in Hartford, CT. As a pioneer of conceptual art, he has had a major influence on 20th century American art. After serving in the United States Army, LeWitt moved continued above on next column to the right | to New York and attended the Cartoonist and Illustrators School (now the School of Visual Arts). LeWitt employed basic cubic forms, serial structures and modular grids as key elements in his work. The art work itself emphasizes the conception of the initial idea as LeWitt perceives it. His titles are convoluted but describe the essence of his concept behind each work. They serve as instructions for whoever executes the drawing and explanations to the viewers of the processes involved.

For this exhibition, the Museum selected several local apprentices to help install Wall Drawing #618, creating a very special place that is an immersive experience for Museum visitors.

LeWitt created more than 600 wall drawings, both in black and white and in color, that have been viewed by millions of visitors. Some of his drawings have become permanent installations but many are painted over after the close of the exhibitions. His permanent drawings include All Combinations of Arcs from Corners and Sides; Straight, Not-Straight, and Broken Lines - a 1972 drawing in blue chalk, which covers the entire wall of the Kuntshalle in Bern, Switzerland, and a similarly-titled work in white chalk on a black wall (1975) which is located in the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art. Other works can be found in the Tate Gallery in London, the Israel Museum in Jerusalem and the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York.

This exhibition is courtesy of the Sol LeWitt Foundation. Thank you to exhibition sponsors Al DiStefano, Russell and Ladene Newton, and Nancy Holmes.

Black Mountain College Museum + Arts Center in Asheville, NC, Features Works by Dan Rice

The Black Mountain College Museum + Arts Center in Asheville, NC, will present Dan Rice at Black Mountain College: Painter Among the Poets, curated by Brian E. Butler, on view from Sept. 5 through Jan. 10, 2015. A reception will be held on Sept. 5, from 5-8pm. A gallery talk by Butler will be given at 7pm.

On Saturday, Sept. 6, at 2pm, there will be a panel discussion called "Dan Rice and the Poetics of Painting" to engage with and explore Dan Rice's legacy. The panel session will feature four people who studied painting with Rice: Christina Maile, artist and landscape architect; Ed Casey, renowned philosopher; Parviz Mohassel, philosopher and architect; and Virginia Foster, Rice's partner for more than 20 years. This special event is free for BMCM+AC members + students with ID or $5 for non-members.

The exhibition focuses on the paintings and relationships of Rice, a Black Mountain College student, then teacher for 10 years, friend and associate of Franz Kline, Robert Rauschenberg, Robert Motherwell, Willem deKooning and Mark Rothko, and overlooked figure in the development of Abstract Expressionism. Curated by Dr. Brian E. Butler, BMCM+AC Board Member, the project includes an amply illustrated exhibition catalogue with an essay by Butler.

This project brings Rice's underrecognized work to the forefront and establishes a firm link between his time at Black Mountain College and his lifelong commitment to painting. Simultaneously, it explores the interconnections between the visual and the literary by highlighting Rice's relationships with noted Black Mountain College poets, Charles Olson and Robert Creeley among many others. A work of Rice's was used on the cover of Vol. 6 of the Black Mountain Review as well as on Jargon 4: The Double-Backed Beast, Paul Blackburn's The Dissolving Fabric and books by Joel Oppenheimer. Joe Early and Ross Feld. This exhibition will serve as the visual counterpoint to BMCM+AC's 6th annual conference, ReVIEWING Black Mountain College 6: The Writers of Black Mountain College to be held at UNC Asheville's Reuter Center Sept. 26-28.

While at Black Mountain College, Rice's friends and peers included Robert Rauschenberg, Cy Twombly, and Robert Motherwell, who advised Rice, "Exhibit as often as you can." He worked with Arthur Penn in theater design, and Merce Cunningham and John Cage in mixed media events. A central figure in the scene as the New York School developed, Rice lived, worked, and exhibited in Manhattan for many years. He then moved to Connecticut, where he taught and painted for the rest of his life. He died in 2003.

Rice's work is among the best of his adventurous generation. His paintings are in the collections of the Museum of Modern Art, the Yale University Art Gallery, the Wadsworth Atheneum, and the Princeton University Art Museum. Simultaneously, his work is among the most underappreciated. Rice made his living not from his art, but as a frame builder, stretching canvases and mixing paints for his famous colleagues. His role as assistant to artist Mark Rothko is most famously depicted in the acclaimed play Red, by John Logan.

Rice is primarily thought of as an bstract Expressionist, but he found the term problematic, arguing, "Painting, or any other art form, is not about selfexpression. This idea, which has spread somehow, is simply not true. And Abstract Expressionism itself is often thought of as some wild expression of the self, of emotion. This, again, is completely untrue. The last thing a painter thinks of is himself. Painting is truly a means of expressing the ineffable."

Rice's paintings are both unique to him and clearly a part of the Black Mountain College tradition. This exhibition of Rice's paintings will be a first step in the process of rediscovering and adding his work to the history of modernist painting in America.

The Black Mountain College Museum + Arts Center preserves and continues the unique legacy of educational and artistic innovation of Black Mountain College for public study and enjoyment. We achieve our mission through collection, conservation, and educational activities including exhibitions, publications, and public

Flood Fine Arts Center in Asheville, NC, Features Mail Art

The Flood Fine Arts Center, located in the Phil Mechanics Building, located in the River Arts District of in Asheville, NC, will present the 9th annual Anything Goes - Everything Shows, on view in the Courtyard Gallery, from Sept. 6 through Oct. 29, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 6, from 6-9pm.

Flood Fine Arts Center

Fundamentally, mail art in the context of a Mail Art Network is a form of conceptual art. It is a "movement" with no membership and no leaders. Mail art is art which uses the postal system as a medium.

An amorphous international mail art network, involving thousands of participants in over 50 countries, evolved between the 1950s and the present. It was influenced by other movements including Dada and Fluxus. The Courtyard Gallery receives hundreds of submissions from 80 countries and from throughout the US every year.

Themes could include anti-war, antiart snobbery, anti-gallery art, love, sex, dissent, anything goes! Mail artists like to claim that mail art began when Cleopatra had herself delivered to Julius Caesar in a rolled-up carpet. However, perhaps the initial genesis of mail art was in postal stationery, from which mail art is now typically distinguished (if not defined in its broadest sense).

This is a celebration of our creative

The Bascom in Highlands, NC, Features Works by Tim Barnwell

The Bascom in Highlands, NC, is presenting Faces and Places, featuring photographs by Tim Barnwell, a commercial and fine art photographer based in Asheville, NC, on view through Nov. 9, 2014. Experience Highlands and Cashiers through this beautiful assemblage of photographs.

Barnwell's prints are in the permanent collections of The Metropolitan Museum of Art, The New Orleans Museum of Art, The High Museum of Atlanta, The Mint Museum in Charlotte, R. J. Reynolds Industries, The SOHO Photo Gallery in New York, The Newark Museum of Art, and The Bank of America Corporate Collection.

In collaboration with The Cashiers Historical Society, The Highlands Historical Society and The Bascom, Barnwell documented selected people and places of Highlands and Cashiers through his photography with their accompanying oral histories. In each town, a well-known native resident is paired with a well-known historical place.

Skyuka Fine Art in Tryon, NC, Offers Works by Richard Oversmith

Skyuka Fine Art in Tryon, NC, will present Richard Oversmith-Travels Near & Far, on view from Sept. 27 through Oct. 24, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 27, from 5-8pm.

This exhibition includes landscapes from his recent travels to France. Many depict colorful scenes of the Rivera, in particular the Cote d'Azur, as well as lovely street scenes from Provence. Oversmith visited the same lily pond where Monet was famously inspired and produced a stunning vibrant piece with reflective colors that dance off the water's surface. Also included in this solo exhibit are breathtaking paintings of lavender fields that you can almost smell.

One of Oversmith's favorite things to do is travel and paint 'en plein air'. "I've always a had a passion for both but, it wasn't until my first trip overseas that I first combined the two," Oversmith explains. While studying abroad in London his teachers encouraged him to go outside and paint from life, on the streets on London. Since that initial experience Oversmith has found great joy in traveling both near and far to paint some of the worlds prettiest places.

"My most memorable trip to date is the time I spent seven month living, with my family, in Brittany France. This trip was the first time Oversmith was afforded the luxury of painting everyday!

Work by Richard Oversmith

Oversmith reflects, "When you can paint everyday, that's when you really make the most progress in your work". Since that Brittany trip Oversmith has been back to France three time and to Italy once, as well as many beautiful US destinations.

"Travel, in my opinion, is key to keeping a fresh view of where you live and paint." Asheville, NC, where Oversmith calls home, is abundant with nature and beauty, but it's getting away from this area that truly keeps him motivated to paint Western North Carolina with fresh eyes.

is a past program director for Penland School. She is now focusing fully on creating art, working with photography and painting. Moore says, "I think of my show as a love letter to Mitchell County. I've found our area to be unique in natural beauty, and in personal expression in private and public spaces. It's this dichotomy I hope to capture in this body of photographs."

Although Moore's photos are moments captured in a variety of scenes, somehow a common aesthetic is present. Her goal is to create and respond to beauty. That could be the light, form, color, humor, or something jarring. Some might be surprised by the kinds of things she sees beauty in, but it all adds to her apprecia-

Caldwell Arts Council in Lenoir, NC, Present the 29th Annual Sculpture Celebration - Sept. 6, 2014

The Caldwell Arts Council in Lenoir, NC, in partnership with Tri State Sculptors Association and Mountain Sculptors, will present the 29th Annual Sculpture Celebration on Saturday, Sept. 6, 2014. The event is held from 9am to 4pm at the T.H. Broyhill Walking Park, 945 Lakewood Circle in Lenoir. This event is free to the public, and shuttles will run throughout the day between the park and area parking lots.

The Celebration will feature sculptural artwork by artists from across the eastern United States who will compete for cash prizes totaling $11,000. Realistic and abstract, traditional and contemporary, movable and stationary, indoor and outdoor - sculptures of all types will be on display. The juror for this year's event is Asheville, NC, artist Randy Shull.

Lenoir's Annual Sculpture Celebration is recognized as the longest-running sculpture competition in the Southeast and a driving force in the area's sculptorfriendly environment. The event started small but now attracts artists and visitors from across the United States. "This is a great show for both experienced artists and for a first-time art experience," says Lee Carol Giduz, Caldwell Arts Council Executive Director.

Many sculptors arrive early to install larger sculptures and to pick the best spot for their artwork. A buffet dinner will be held to welcome them and to introduce the judge and sponsors of the event on Friday, Sept. 5, beginning at 7pm. This Blue Jeans Preview Party is free for registered sculptors, $20 in advance for guests. The public is invited as well, so call 828/754-2486 to reserve your tickets early to save.

Lenoir, is located in Caldwell County in the beautiful foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, off Hwy. 321 between Hickory and the Blowing Rock / Boone area in NC.

For further information about the Sculpture Celebration contact the Caldwell Arts Council by calling 828/754-2486, e-mail to (info@caldwellarts.com), or visit (www.caldwellarts.com).

Caldwell Arts Council in Lenoir, NC, Offers Works in Response to Poetry

The Caldwell Arts Council in Lenoir, NC, will present Concertina, Interpreted, featuring artwork created in response to poetry from the book "Concertina" by Joseph Bathanti, poet laureate of North Carolina and Professor of Creative Writing at Appalachian State University, on view from Sept. 12 - 26, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 12, from 5-7pm.

Approximately 30 artists from Caldwell and surrounding counties have created art works in response to poems they selected from the book "Concertina" by Joseph Bathanti. These works include many styles of art ranging from drawings to paintings and encaustic work, and from photography to wood and metal installa-

In 1976, Joseph Bathanti left his home in Pittsburgh for a fourteen month sojourn as a VISTA Volunteer with the North Carolina Department of Corrections.

Bathanti's new volume of poems, "Concertina", recounts in lyrical sweep his entry into the surreal, brutal, and often terrifyingly beautiful netherworld of convicts and their keepers. It is a world with one foot still firmly planted in the old chain gang, the other venturing beyond the manacles of history into a realm of second chances, while the country, in the throes of its bicentennial celebration, still swoons from Watergate and its aftermath.

What's more, "Concertina" is an out-sider's meditation on the American South and the power of place to transform not only language, but to instill in the speaker the impulse to tell the story of everything his eye lights upon. Indeed, Bathanti's world is as much about the geography, the very ether, of North Carolina, as it is poised on a tightrope of its own making, pitched near detonation.

There are poems about the gas chamber, bounty hunters, bloodhounds and violence. But there are also poems about yard basketball games, the prison kitchen, Christmas parties, children visiting their imprisoned mothers, guards as undone by their lives in prison as the prisoners, and released convicts stumbling into society after years behind bars. Above all, these poems doggedly insist that, even in abject suffering, sustained love and shared humanity supply redemption.

Bathanti is author of seven books of poetry, two novels, and a collection of

In addition, the Caldwell Arts Council will host Joseph Bathanti for readings of his poetry at 7pm on Tuesday, Sept. 23, 2014. The public is invited free of charge. RSVPs are requested; please call 828/754-

WILLIAM JAMESON WORKSHOPS 2014

"Fall on the Blue Ridge," Saluda, NC "Workshop: For Your Painting Group!"

October 20 - 24, 2014 Dates you choose can conduct a workshop planned especially for your location! Please contact us for planning and organizing a workshop in your area for your art organization or guild.

Each William Jameson Painting Workshop is designed to be an educational and entertaining experience. Along with exhilarating travel, students from beginner to advanced will receive one-on-one instruction in oil, watercolor or acrylic and pen and ink sketching.

Whether the travel is down the mountain or to the Bahamas or Italy, you will be with like-minded folks who share your love of art. There will be six hours of instruction each painting day at sites I have carefully selected for their architectural interest or appealing landscapes. Each day will include demonstrations, critiques and help with photography for use in painting your own work of art. All workshops include a "welcome" party and some workshops include private museum tours or excursions to special venues that we have cultivated over the years.

Non-painter companions are always welcome! Our workshop trips take us to breathtaking places where there is something of interest for everyone. Of course, special pricing is available for these companions. Please see specific workshop information for additional descriptive information.

Transylvania Community Arts Council in Brevard, NC, Features Works by Shellie Lewis-Dambax & George Peterson

Transylvania Community Arts Council in Brevard, NC, will present an exhibition of works by Shellie Lewis-Dambax and George Peterson, on view in the TC Arts Council Gallery, from Sept. 26 through Oct. 17, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 26, from 5-8pm.

Lewis-Dambax and Peterson both share an art studio located in downtown Brevard, in an old church on French Broad Street.

ing as a painter and mixed media artist. Her work has shown in the following galleries: Atelier Gallery - Charleston, SC, Red Wolf Gallery - Brevard, NC, Allison Sprock Fine Art Gallery - Charlotte, NC and the Watson Gallery - Atlanta, GA.

Lewis-Dambax says of her process, "My work is a direct reflection of my mood and emotional state. I have an obsession to paint. The Act of creating is also a struggle for me that opens a new conversation and awareness within myself. The process of my paintings begin with writing, sketching randomly and rhythmically, applying various marks and splotches of paint, then I apply and remove paint to reveal images, developing them to my liking. This process may take hours or weeks to complete. I paint, construct and explore new means to create works that I desire to be emotional and authentic. Each encounter and creation of art adds meaning to my life and is essential to my sanity. I seek to explore my humanness through my art in hopes to connect to others. My work is a struggle."

Work by Shellie Lewis-Dambax

George Peterson's artwork stems from wood. You may have seen his wooden bowls in photos of the Oval Office. His work has appeared in galleries and exhibits across the country including: the Smithsonian Craft Show - Washington, DC, del Mano Gallery – Los Angeles, CA, The Copper Fox Gallery, Red Wolf Gallery - Brevard, NC, Lafontsee Gallery in Michigan, and SOFA in Chicago.

Peterson says of his process, "I channel a lot of destructive energy into my art. I love to scar, break and burn the wood. I'll carve with a chainsaw, ax, chisels, fire.... anything. If it sounds a bit destructive it's because it is. it stems right from punk rock and wanting to express myself in a basic and direct way - Breaking things can be so satisfying, and if you channel that into a piece of art, you can get a constructive, creative result. But that is just the first part. After that, layers of color and polish are added and parts are rejoined with stitching and steel. The forms, colors and

Rutherford County Visual Artists Guild Offers Celebration of the Arts in Spindale, NC - Sept. 18-21, 2014

tion of the Arts (COTA), a judged art competition sponsored by the Rutherford County Visual Artists Guild (RCVAG) and supported in part by Grass Roots funding from the NC Arts Council, is announced for 2014. COTA is scheduled for Sept. 18-21, 2014, at The Foundation Performing Arts Center on the Spindale Campus of Isothermal Community College in Spindale, NC. Admission is free and the public is invited to view the art as well as vote for the People's Choice. The show is open 9am until 5pm, Thursday through Saturday and 1 to 4pm on Sunday.

Area artists who meet eligibility and other requirements as outlined in COTA guidelines may enter up to three pieces of either 2D or 3D artwork in various media including paintings, photography, clay, wood, textiles, glass, metal, and jewelry. In addition to the recognition of participating in this regional show, artists are eligible for cash prizes, honorary mentions, and ribbons in several categories. The deadline for all entries is Sept. 5, 2014.

Judging both 2D and 3D entries is Susan Carlisle Bell, Associate Professor at Gardner Webb University since 1985. Her areas of instruction are art survey, art education and painting. Carlisle Bell will select award winners in the categories of Best of Show as well as 1st, 2nd and 3rd Place in 2D and 3D.

The four day Celebration of the Arts includes the ever popular COTA Gift Shop/Boutique open to the public during the each day of the event. The wide selection of unique art and fine craft created by RCVAG members is a favorite of attendees making early holiday purchases or finding special gifts.

Other features of the show include a Silent Auction with beautiful gift baskets filled with items donated by supporters of the arts and a look at the creativity of students who participated in the 2014 RCVAG Summer Art Camps. Also, for the first time this year, Student Members of the Rutherford County Visual Artists Guild age 15 and older have been invited to exhibit their art free of charge in a non-judged Student Members Exhibit and young persons of all ages may display their art in a special Junior Art Display.

The Rutherford County Visual Artists Guild is a non-profit (501 C-3) organization whose mission is to foster the visual arts and fine craft in Rutherford County. The Guild and the Visual Arts Center are operated totally by volunteers. Proceeds from the gift shop and silent auction as well as other activities Guild activities provide a variety of art opportunities for the community including funding scholarships for Rutherford County high school senior who will study art in college and for children age 8-12 for Summer Art

Crimson Laural Gallery in Bakersville, NC, Features Works by Rob Pullyen and Joe Singewald

Crimson Laural Gallery in Bakersville, NC, will present Current Work: Sculptural and functional ceramics by Rob Pullyen and Current Work: Current functional ceramics by Joe Singewald, on view from Sept. 6 through Oct. 3, 2014. A reception for both exhibits will be held on Sept. 6, from 6-8pm.

Rob Pullyen offered the following about his work, "I am in love with the basic material of ceramics: wet clay. I have, for some wonderful reason, become comfortable with the language of clay so that working with it is exhilarating, frightening, mysterious...and totally satisfying."

Work by Rob Pullyen

"While I have no academic background in clay, I have studied under some great teachers including: Kathy Triplett, George Bowes, Richard Notkin, Steven Heinemann, Yeh-Wen Kuo, Richard Burkett and Anne Hirondelle," adds Pullyen.

"I am most creative when I'm working with restrictions. Some of my ceramic work for the last several years has had as its restriction - the ability of the pieces to hold water. Many of my forms are obvious in this, others less so. I think of these works as sculpture with a hidden ability to be functional. Other work I do is more obviously sculpture. I enjoy creating both."

"The surfaces of my work are manipulated both before and after I fire them. I do a lot of "marking" in the wet stoneware clay and apply multiple layers of underglazes, stains and oxides. The pieces are usually fired many times to build up layers of color and texture. I rarely use glazes. With each piece, I force myself to do something I've never done before: a form, a texture, or a color, for instance. This means each piece is an experiment of sorts. It also means I destroy a lot of evidence, but it keeps the anxiety level sufficiently high and the joy of success addictively sweet," says Pullyen.

"Prior to my work in clay, I was involved with contemporary fiber for 30 years. Old man."

Joe Singewald offers the following about his work, "I am a potter because I love making pots. The pots I construct are those pieces that please me. I am not potting with hopes of being rich and I am not making pots with aspirations of a ceramic

"I am a potter because I love using pots," adds Singewald. "My cupboards are filled with stacks of plates and cups, mugs and bowls. Shelves and tables throughout the house display jars, pitchers and platters. Some of this collection I have made, but most were unpacked from other potter's kilns. Every morning, after coffee has

Arts Council of York County in Rock Hill, SC, Offers Annual Competition

The Arts Council of York County in Rock Hill, SC, is presenting the 25th Annual Juried Competition, on view in the Dalton Gallery at the Center for the Arts, through Sept. 14, 2014.

Judging this year's competition is Mary Epp-Carter, who currently teaches printmaking, drawing, and portfolio preparation theory at the South Carolina Governor's School for the Arts and Humanities. Previously, she served as an adjunct lecturer in the art departments at Anderson University and Clemson University. Epp-Carter relocated to South Carolina in 2006 from Boston, MA, where she taught at the DeCordova and Danforth Museums. She holds a BS in Visual Communication from Boston University, an MS in Counseling Psychology from Lesley University, a BFA from Massachusetts College of Art and Design, and an MFA in Printmaking from Clemson University.

In addition to teaching, Epp-Carter maintains a studio that serves as her workshop where she creates her own works of art. She has shown nationally and internationally, and her works are held in private and public collections, including the Boston Public Library, the DeCordova Museum (MA), Emory & Henry College (VA), the Permobil Foundation (Sweden), and Galerie d'Art Contemporain (France).

Epp-Carter selected 38 works by 26 artists out of 142 entries from 23 cities and 5 states to be displayed in the 25th Annual Juried Competition exhibition.

Mint Museum Randolph in Charlotte, NC, Offers Annual Mint Museum Potters Market Invitational - Sept. 6, 2014

Collectors will once again have access to the latest works by leaders in the rich tradition of North Carolina pottery when potters from across North Carolina and surrounding areas return to Mint Museum Randolph in Charlotte, NC, for the 10th annual Mint Museum Potters Market Inv tational on Saturday, Sept. 6, 2014.

Fifty outstanding North Carolina potters have been invited to participate in this year's event, presented by the Delhom Service League, the ceramics affiliate of The Mint Museum, promoting ceramic arts and education. Every year, hundreds of pottery enthusiasts line up hours in advance of the opening to gain access to the day's best treasures.

Among this year's participants is Ben Owen III of Seagrove, NC, a member of one of the most well-known families in North Carolina pottery. "The Delhom Service League's Potters Market Invitational held at the Mint Museum is a potter's topnotch opportunity and a pottery collector's playground," Owen said. "Potters are honored to be invited to showcase their most recent creations among North Carolina's premiere clay artists. Shoppers are treated to a wide range of clay creations in a focused environment that offers them a veritable tour of our state's best potteries in one tent, one day. Discover a new adventure in a world shaped in clay!"

The Delhom Service League is proud to honor collectors this year by naming

Carol Gorelick Honorary Chair of the Potters Market Invitational. While she and her husband Shelton collect broadly in the crafts, their focus is mainly on North Carolina pottery. Carol's advice to beginning collectors: "Buy what speaks to you, but always buy the best you can afford. Choose one good piece rather than a number of lesser pieces....I like the personal contact with the artist that you have when you collect North Carolina potters."

Added Barbara Perry of the Delhom Service League: "Any collector can relate to Carol's ardent admiration for pots, and her enthusiasm for their makers. She is the epitome of the true collector: avid, focused, selective, but not afraid to take a risk on an unknown potter. Carol is one of those who have helped keep the North Carolina tradition healthy and alive."

Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte, NC, Offers Works by Seth Rouser

Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte, NC, is presenting Seth Rouser: Hands Held to Empyrean, on view in the CPCC Ross Gallery, through Oct. 9, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 4, from 5-7pm. An artist's lecture will be offered on Sept. 18, at 2pm in Tate Hall.

Rouser's paintings depict cloudscapes overlaid with gestural marks and emotive color. These paintings are a manifestation of the artist's thoughts on time, change and the human experience. Rouser uses his clouds to symbolize and confront existential issues and the significance of being.

"I am intrigued by the inherent ability of clouds to represent constant change, while simultaneously evoking a sense of timelessness," said Rouser. "A cloud accumulates, dissipates and is moved by unseen forces, much like a human life. In viewing clouds, one can read them as tranquil or tumultuous, depending on their qualities. I find this constant flux of the sky parallel to the human experience. The mind and the body are always changing and yet there is a sense of a continuous self, or being."

Ciel Gallery in Charlotte, NC, Presents an Exhibition of Trees

Ciel Gallery in Charlotte, NC, partners with TreesCharlotte to present Tree Party, a national exhibition juried by local Charlotte favorite Andy Braitman, with an opening reception on Friday, Sept. 5, from 6-9pm. The exhibition will be on view through Sept. 27, 2014.

Braitman, an artist of national stature, has been featured in galleries and in one-man and group shows in Santa Fe, Chicago, Atlanta, Millburn, NJ, Washington, DC, Noorbeek, Holland, Rio de Janiero and Curitba, Brazil. Braitman has been an Artist in Residence for Prince Georges County, Maryland and for Edgecombe and Mitchell Counties in North Carolina. In those roles he has been guest lecturer at area colleges, conducted workshops, judged art competitions, and participated in public art projects. His students praise "his many geniuses" — his ability to bring out each individual's own artistic style, his expertise in teaching drawing, his ability to work with students at all levels, and the encouragement and support he gives to every student.

The following artists were juried into this show: Nettie Amirtharaj, Saba Barnard, Robin Beckett, Asher Bernstein, Linda Biggers, Grace Blowers, Lauren Brown, Jean Cauthen, Chris Craft, Randy L. Dean (Best in Show), Rachel Donlop, Lynn Felts, Elyse Frederick, Kim Gibbs, Jonathan Grauel, Jennifer Halls, Glen Hardymon, Paul Hastings, Laura Hitchcock, Jerry Kirk, Gene Lazo, Flavia Lovatelli, Suzanne Mellichamp, Marcee Musgrove, Susan Nutall, Terri Otten, Diane Pike, Lesley Powell, Jackie Radford, Patricia S.Raible (Honorable Mention), Craig Ritchie, Eva Rizzardi, Josue Roman, Charles Shedd, Lo Simon Kevin Shank, Claudia Soria, Jennifer Spaker, Jen Walls, Marlies Wandres and Leigh Williams

Partner Trees Charlotte is a public/private collaborative dedicated to planting 15,000 trees annually, primarily through volunteer efforts, with a goal of achieving 50% tree canopy coverage by 2050. The collaborative also educates Charlotte's residents on the importance of the canopy and ways to plant and preserve trees. Among the myriad benefits, trees clean our air, ease storm water run-off, reduce our energy usage, cool our streets, parks, and homes, increase property values, and provide natural beauty that is the envy of cities across the world.

Tree Party plans to support TreesCharlotte's efforts through a Giving Tree of 6"x6" artworks gifted by artists nationwide and sold to the public for $25 each. Ciel will donate 100% of sales proceeds from the Giving Tree to TreesCharlotte, as well as 100% of donations received during the September run of Tree Party.

"TreesCharlotte is grateful for Ciel Gallery's generous support of our efforts to preserve and enhance Charlotte's tree canopy," says Director Dave Cable. "With the Tree Party initiative, Ciel Gallery has set the stage to raise awareness of, and capital for, Charlotte's extraordinary urban forest – what a wonderful gift to our community and to future generations!"

Also planned for Sept. 5 is a book signing by Charlotte author Maggie Barker Booth, featuring her book Treasure in the City, a collection of photographs and history of ten "treasure trees" around the city of Charlotte. The book signing will take place during Friday's reception.

Ciel Gallery is a Fine Art Collective of 27 local artists working in a wide variety of media. In addition to three gallery spaces, Ciel hosts weekly classes for all ages, open studio, art retreats, and special

Features Works by Eck McCanless & Annual Pottery Exhibit

The Stanly Arts Guild in Albemarle, NC, will present two new exhibits including an exhibition of pottery by Seagrove, NC, potter Eck McCanless, on view at the Falling Rivers Gallery, from Sept. 5 - 18, 2014 and the annual Falling Rivers Pottery Show, on view at the gallery from Sept. 19 - 26, 2014. McCanless will give a demonstration of Sept. 4, at 6:30pm. A reception will be held on Sept. 19, from 5-7pm.

Eck McCanless was exposed to pottery at a young age in his parents' shop Dover Pottery. While still in elementary school, he began to get recognition for his "monster" sculptures in the local newspaper. At age 10, he turned his first pot and soon began making spoon rests and other small pots to sell in the family's Seagrove shop.

In 1993, at the age of 18, McCanless began turning pots professionally for Dover Pottery. Turning alongside his father, Al McCanless and Bruce Gholson pushed him to stretch his imagination, as well as the clay on the wheel. He soon became known for his lightweight and elegant forms in crystalline.

On July 15, 2011, he opened Eck Mc-Canless Pottery on Old US Highway 220 in Seagrove. He shifted his focus and is quickly becoming known for his agateware, which celebrates the clay itself and its manipulation by the potter's hands. After turning four different colors of clay together on the wheel, McCanless carves the outside of his agateware pots to reveal patterns similar to wood grain or fudge ripple ice cream.

In addition to agateware, McCanless continues to make crystalline for both his shop and Dover Pottery. His newest crystalline glaze is black with a mirror finish and is getting quite a bit of attention.

The annual Falling Rivers Pottery Show's featured potters include: Eck McCanless, David Edwards, Sydney Williams, Travis Hall, Christina McNeil and Karen Wright.

Falling Rivers Gallery is a cooperative venue of the Stanly Arts Guild. Member staffed, this gallery offers the very best in local art and crafts including oil and watercolor, photography, pottery and ceramic art, jewelry, native American art, gourd sculpture and much more.

Stanly Arts Guild in Albemarle, NC, | Cabarrus Arts Council in Concord, NC, Offers Nature Inspired Art

The Cabarrus Arts Council in Concord, NC, is presenting Into The Woods, exhibition, featuring works by Elizabeth Bradford, Buzz Coren, Jim Carpenter, Charles Farrar, William Jameson, Jean LeCluyse, Debbie Littledeer, Jason Lydic, Roger Martin, Dottie Moore, Luna Lee Ray, Susannah Ravenswing, Nathan Rose, and Anatoly Tsiris, on view through Oct.

"We travel Into the Woods to reflect on the true beauty of our surroundings that is nature," said Rebecca Collins, Cabarrus Arts Council Visual Arts Director and Curator for the show. "This exhibition invites visitors into the shadows of the forest and allows them to get lost in the woods.

"Historically, the natural world was the first subject matter in artistic expression. Whether a depiction of sprawling vista or woodland animal a wood turned vessel or crafted adornment from the earth, man has utilized and expressed the glory of nature through artworks.

Work by Dottie Moore

"Through paintings, sculpture, quilts, drawings, furniture, serigraphs, and jewelry we see how natural surroundings have inspired and informed contemporary art. We engage with properties of the earth and examine how artists have transformed such raw materials into natural treasures." Into the Woods showcases natureinspired artworks, including woodland animals, works of wood and landscapes by 15 artists:

Elizabeth Bradford of Davidson, NC, is a native North Carolinian with deep roots in the rural landscape. During much of her career, she has sought to record the look of the traditional landscape before urbanization. Her acrylic paintings on canvas or wood panel, though representational, have a strong connection to the traditions of abstraction.

Buzz Coren of Burnsville, NC, is a woodcrafter who creates multilayered bowls and vessels. He works with many different species of hardwood veneer, and custom dye some of it to achieve both subtle and striking color combinations.

Jim Carpenter of Pfafftown, NC, considers himself a "bird carver" rather than a woodcarver because, while his birds are primarily wood, the habitats he places them in are often metal, epoxies or plastic. He paints the exquisitely detailed pieces with acrylics or oils.

Charles Farrar of Concord, NC, is a woodturner who creates a variety of turned pieces, from classical forms with fine finishes to those with hand carved, textured, and pigmented surfaces. He is happiest when working with found woods

William Jameson of Saluda, NC, incorporates heavy applications of paint and strong, energetic brushstrokes in his introspective oil landscapes. His goal is to explore the subject matter in detail, and, in the process, go past the surface of the individual elements in the landscape to reveal the mystery and power of nature.

Jean LeCluyse of Chapel Hill, NC, honed observation and drawing skills during several years as a scientific illustrator. She creates richly detailed narrative drawings as well as mixed media pieces that may include acrylic, colored pencil, collaged elements and graphite over randomly textured surfaces.

Debbie Littledeer of Burnsville, NC, is a printmaker known for serigraphs of landscapes and whimsical animals. She creates pictures of the mountains that surround her and fantasies that dance through her head.

Jason Lydic of Hendersonville, NC, parlayed a birthday gift from his wife – a trip to a blacksmith shop to learn welding and forging skills - into a career as an artist. He is a former zookeeper who uses his knowledge of the natural world to make realistic animal sculptures.

Roger Martin of Albemarle, NC, has sculpted animals in one form or another for 35 years. The majority of his work is sculpted in clay then cast in bronze. His goal is to capture the essence or personality of the subject while at the same time creating an accurate anatomical replica of the species.

Dottie Moore of Rock Hill, SC, is a studio quilt artist whose work has been exhibited, collected and published throughout the world. She refers to her quilts as "visual conversations with fabric and thread to explore the mysteries of earth and sky." She has participated in both the American Craft Council shows and in The Smithsonian Craft Show.

Susannah Ravenswing of Germantown, NC, has crafted richly detailed one-of-akind jewelry for more than 30 years. Her pieces, many of which are inspired by her rambles through the woods, include rare gems, fossils, gold and silver.

Nathan Rose of Belmont, NC, is a furniture maker who is greatly influenced by fine pieces and techniques from the past, including mortise and tenon joinery, surface embellishments, fine finishes, and traditional design element.

Anatoly Tsiris of Charlotte, NC, is a craftsman and artist who creates large vessels for home décor, interior design and decorative art. His pieces, which are crafted exclusively of local woods, tend to have primarily organic shapes.

The Galleries are located in the Historic Cabarrus County Courthouse, in downtown Concord. The Galleries will be closed Saturday, Aug. 30, and Monday, Sept. 1, for Labor Day. There are activities for children, including the "I Spy" scavenger hunt and "Art Boxes" in conjunction with the exhibition. Admission and activi-

of the human experience on this planet, the universal is always the most intimate. My artwork is not quite in my control. I am pulling beings out of the realm of misty archetypes and spirits and giving them form. I can't claim what I make, I can only be honored that they come through me. I learn from my sculptures. I investigate empathy within myself, and honor the intricacies of the lives of people all around me. My sculptures teach me to see the complexities of every human life."

Working with clay, wood, and bronze, Michaelson loves the materials she works with and is always exploring what can be done with them. Describing her process as non-linear, her sculptures grow through adding and subtracting. Never shying away from utilizing additional materials or found objects, she has even chopped up a sculpture and used epoxy to put it back together differently. "I love to be fluid, and never know what a piece will be like until it is happening."

Work by Maria Michaelson

Having spent years traveling in West Africa, India, Central and South America, Europe and Australia, Michaelson draw from traveling openly, trying to understand what it is like to live in different paradigms, with different beliefs. It is through all her experiences, with all the people she has come in contact with, on all of the continents that she has visited, that brought her to this finding. "There is something that holds us all together. It is in the material world and the spiritual world, and my work is about the threads that are human and real at our core." It is about living and experiencing everything human until it is familiar.

Isaac and Sonia Luski left communist Cuba in the 1960s with only four suitcases of belongings. Although they had few possessions, they wanted to bring artwork from their native country. On the way to the airport, they visited Rene Portocarrero's studio and purchased two of his paintings. After a brief stay in Miami, the Luski family settled in Charlotte, NC.

Isaac and his brother, Abraham, started a real estate development business and after taking advantage of Charlotte's rapid growth, the Luski's realized great profits.

Work by Richard Ritter

A trip to Penland School of Crafts in 1967 was the inspiration which began their expansive glass collection. Being fascinated by what they saw, they met renowned glass blowing artists Mark Peiser, Harvey Littleton, and Richard Ritter and became lifelong friends. Most of the artists the Luskis support are like family. They appreciate the artists as much as they appreciate the art that they create. "We collect art because we love it. Most of the time, we develop one-on-one relationships with the artists, and we maintain those relationships because there is chemistry," says Sonia.

For nearly forty-seven years, the Luskis have collected artwork from around the world. Every room in their Charlotte home is filled with contemporary, intricate glass pieces as well as paintings and sculpture from renowned artists. The Luskis purchase only the art that they love and are among Charlotte's premier arts patrons and philanthropists. Art is their passion and they believe it should be shared with the community. They began contributing works to Foundation For The Carolinas in the 1990s.

In 2011, the Luskis gave a significant portion of their mostly glass art collection to Foundation For The Carolinas for its new headquarters in uptown Charlotte. "Glass is healing," Isaac Luski said. "You look at it and it makes you feel better." The vision was to create an accessible place for the public to enjoy and be inspired by art. Located in the heart of uptown Charlotte, Foundation For The Carolinas is a non-profit corporation that aims to serve individuals, families, nonprofit groups, and corporations as they make a positive impact on their communities. It is one of the largest community foundations in the Southeast.

Among the pieces in this exhibition, glass artists Gary Beecham, George Bucquet, William Carlson, José Chardiet, Stephen Edwards, Sidney Hutter, Jon Kuhn, John Littleton & Kate Vogel, Richard Ritter, and Michael Taylor are featured. Five of these artists, Beecham, Kuhn, Littleton & Vogel, and Ritter, are North Carolina residents. Each artist has his or her own style.

Gary Beecham's (Spruce Pine, NC) work has been heavily influenced by ancient glass in both form and technique. He has experimented with many ways of manipulating glass involving blowing, fusing, and cutting. He is well known for heavy, thick-walled vessels using colored overlay rods. Some pieces contain textile patterns that are introduced into the glass piece as it is being blown, creating the illusion of glass "fabric" floating in the ves-

Husband and wife John Littleton and Kate Vogel (Bakersville, NC) have worked together in their studio near Penland since 1980. They are perhaps best known for their colorful, playful "Acrobags." Their cast pieces are a dramatic departure from the lighthearted bags. Faces and hands are used in various poses and combination to explore states of mind, relationships, and even spiritual themes.

Richard Ritter's (Bakersville, NC) first exposure to hot glass took place in 1968 when Gil Johnson built a small glass blowing facility at College for Creative Studies in Detroit, MI. ### Hamilton Williams Gallery in Morganton, NC, Offers Works by Women Potters

Hamilton Williams Gallery in downtown Morganton, NC, is presenting Southern Women Potters: Contemporary Pottery in the Southern Tradition, on view through Oct. 3, 2014.

The exhibit features the work of seven women artists who carry on the tradition of artisan pottery in the Southeast with diverse approaches and styles. Artists included in the exhibit are Susan Barrett, Robin Beckett, Adrienne Dellinger, Sue Grier, Jennifer Mecca, Sarah Wells Rolland, and Amelia Stamps.

Inspiration for Southern Women Potters was drawn from the Craft Revival movement that occurred around the turn of the twentieth century. At that time in the face of expanding industrialization the people of the southern Appalachians had few opportunities for economic improvement. Even fewer opportunities were available to women, who were often tied into traditional roles of caring for family and household. In response, a revived interest in traditional craft emerged in the region. Mothers and wives began to relearn traditional making with an emphasis on quality, design, and individuality. The sale of their craftwork helped to reshape the economy and culture of the southern Appalachians and to improve the economic status of women and families. Each of the artists included in the exhibition maintain the tradition of design, individuality, and creativity.

Susan Barrett of Hendersonville, NC, is inspired by the pottery of the indigenous people of the Americas. She adapts ancient techniques and uses others directly to create simple round forms with lustrous burnished surfaces of natural clays, resists, and random smoke markings. Many of her pieces evoke images of an evolving planet, with each vessel developing its invidual character through the unpredict-

Robin Beckett of Winston-Salem, NC, draws influence for her work from the wooded mountains of North Carolina. Her collection of "woodsy pots" is particularly inspired by the large trees of Joyce Kilmer National Forest, one of the few virgin forests left in the United States. Observes Beckett, "Each tree takes on its own creative stance, giving me the possibility to play with the creative function."

Adrienne Dellinger is a utilitarian potter and the Executive Director for ClayWorks in Charlotte, NC. Growing up with both Catawba Valley and Seagrove pottery in her home created a foundation for traditional and utilitarian pottery influences while her education at East Carolina University provided a strong Japanese aesthetic.

Sue Grier creates one-of-a-kind pieces, teapots, and limited-series pottery from her studio in Leicester, NC, just outside of Asheville, NC. Originally from New Mexico, Grier worked as a production potter in South Carolina and taught ceramics at Clemson University before moving to her current mountain home. Her work has grown to embrace the vessel through her previous involvement and understanding of more traditional functional pottery forms. Recurring ideas in Grier's work involve the passage of time revealed through the wonders of landscape.

Jennifer Mecca works from her home studio in Gastonia, NC, and enjoys creating each piece of her pottery with its own unique character and personality. She makes elaborate surfaces and forms, starting with wheel-thrown pieces that are altered and embellished with handmade stamps, colored clay sprigs and, most recently, incised drawings with black slip. Mecca's forms are usually organic in nature, which stems from her love of the material she uses and her personal preference for a fluid line.

Sarah Wells Rolland was born and raised in central Florida, but has made her home in Asheville, NC, for the last thirty years. She became captivated by potterymaking as a young wife and mother twenty-five years ago and has grown and developed as an artist ever since. "I am drawn to forms that are simple, graceful, and fluid," says Rolland, "You can see when looking at my work that the motion of the wheel and the hand of the potter are not lost in the finished piece." She is a member of the Southern Highland Craft Guild and owner of The Village Potters, a cooperative gallery in the River Arts District of Asheville, NC.

Amelia Stamps of Lexington, KY, draws her inspiration from a variety of cultures and pottery traditions around the world, but cites Chinese Song Dynasty pottery as a strong influence for her choices of form and color. "Within my work I strive to make well-crafted pottery that records the alteration of material and process. I use volumetric forms that suggest sensuality in the curves and bends of the clay," says the artist. Stamps has received numerous awards and grants for her work, including a recent "Award of Excellence" from Ohio Designer Craftsmen.

Society of Bluffton Artists in Bluffton, SC, Features Works by Murray Sease

The Society of Bluffton Artists in Bluffton, SC, will present Summer Light, a lively collection of recent paintings by local artist Murray Sease, on display from Sept. 2 through Oct. 4, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 5, from 5-7pm.

Work by Murray Sease

Sease is inspired by the vibrant local scene, especially the intense colors of the lowcountry in the summertime. She tries to catch the bustle of the farmers markets and the bountiful produce found there: the historic architecture, lush landscapes, beautiful wildlife, and some not-so-wild life—the odd farm animal and her family's chickens enjoying the cool shade and dappled sunlight. These feathered ladies are some of her favorite models.

With exuberant brushstrokes and vivid colors, Sease strives for an impressionist feeling in her paintings—subjectively recording experiences by capturing fleeting impressions, emphasizing the immediate aspects of a scene. Winning first prize in the oil painting category at SOBA's 2014 Annual Judged Show and garnering regional interest in her art, Sease has found new confidence in her work and is excited to share her latest paintings with you.

The Society hopes you will come enjoy this exhibition and the work of over 100 other member artists.

Hilton Head Art League in Hilton Head, SC, Offers Works by Chris D. Clayton

The Hilton Head Art League in Hilton Head, SC, will present The Lowcountry Through Time, featuring artworks by Chris D. Clayton, on view at the Walter Greer Gallery, at the Arts Center of Coastal Carolina, from Sept. 9 through Oct. 4, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 11, from 5-7pm.

Clayton is a man of many talents, engineer, artist and historian. In his latest exhibition he has combined his interests in art and history to create visual panoply of past events in this area: from the arrival of William Hilton; the Native Americans to the Revolutionary War and the War Between the States, he has created a snapshot of the extensive history of Beaufort county and beyond.

This will be Clayton's fourth show since retiring to Hilton Head in 2004. Most of his paintings are pastel. He used antebellum black and white photographs to create pastel images of a historical event. The period type drawings are made with silver and gold pen on pastel paper.

When Clayton was growing up in Manchester, England, his art teacher took him to an exhibition by Vincent Van Gogh. It was the first time since World War II the exhibition had traveled to England. The paintings had a profound effect on him, and the influence of Vincent Van Gogh can be seen in some of his pastel paint-

"First Battle of Pocotaligo," by Chris D. Clayton

In 2004, Clayton retired to Hilton head where he renewed his interest in art, history and science. He has served as President and chairman of the program committee of the Low Country Civil War Round Table. He is co-founder of the History Forum of the Lowcountry at the Coastal Discovery Museum and has given many presentations on The War Between the States to area historic organizations. He holds the position as historian for the Sons of Confederate Veterans in Beaufort. He has served as President of the Society of Bluffton Artists and is currently Vice

Work by Edwina Bringle

Toe River Arts Council in Spruce Pine, NC, is presenting Edwina Bringle: A Retrospective 1964 - 2014, celebrating Bringle's 50-year retrospective with over 50 functional and decorative fiber arts pieces, on view in the Spruce Pine Gallery, through Sept. 20, 2014. Recognized for her work in color, Bringle's pieces range from the early experimental "Revisited Circles," an optical illusional wool wall piece to the more recent "Springtime Blanket" that explodes the woven wool with prismatic light. Over 50 pieces will lead the eye from the beginning through just yesterday. For further information check our NC Institutional Gallery listings, call the gallery at 828/765-0520 or visit (www.toeriverarts.org).

'Hail to the Chief," detail 2, jacquard woven fabric, by Katey Crews

Redux Contemporary Art Center in Charleston, SC, is presenting Tease It Out, featuring an exhibit of works by Kate Nartker and Katey Crews, on view through Sept. 27, 2014. Through weavings, videos, and sculptural works, artists Kate Nartker and Katey Crews use similar media to explore personal and patriotic narratives, respectively. Nartker reworks old family video into clips, stills, and weavings; Crews creates laboriously woven works and sculptural objects, featuring historic imagery, from presidential to propaganda. ### Some Exhibits That Are Still On View

Our policy at Carolina Arts is to present a press release about an exhibit only once and then go on, but many major exhibits are on view for months. This is our effort to remind you of some of them.

Go check them out before it's too late. The Upstairs Artspace in Tryon, NC, is presenting works by mixed media artist Barbara Rehg and photographer Owen Riley Jr., on view through Sept. 12, 2014.

"Both Riley and Rehg are interested in processes that result in revelation, most especially Riley, who embraces the extremely laborious, dirty and imperfect 19th century process of wet-plate colloidon photography," said Nancy Holmes, who is a member of the Upstairs exhibit committee chaired by artist, Margaret Curtis. reception will follow beginning at 4:30 through 6:30pm. The exhibit, currently touring the US, is a retrospective of more than 50 years of Mead's artwork, ranging from selections from his academic years to his most current works. The exhibit also premieres Mead's latest painting, Shoulder of Orion, inspired by the famous final words of a character from the iconic science fiction film, Blade Runner. The North Carolina Pottery Center in Seagrove, NC, is presenting Many Faces: North Carolina's Face Jug Tradition, on view through Oct. 25, 2014. Curated by L.A. Rhyne, a pottery collector who lives in western North Carolina, Many Faces explores a fascinating group of 19th and 20th century face vessels made by many traditional and contemporary folk artists. North Carolina examples are highlighted along with some from other states and countries. Perhaps first initiated in the United States in the 1800s in South Carolina by enslaved African-Americans and potters from the northeastern US, the face jug tradition spread to Georgia, North Carolina, and throughout the South and other regions. The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, NC, is presenting Matisse and His Muses, featuring prints by Henri Henri Matisse, "Nu au collier et aux cheveux longs (Nude with necklace and long hair)", c. 1920, etching on paper,  $5\,9/16\,x\,7\,1/4$  in. Bequest of Etta and Claribel Cone, 1949.

Matisse, on view at the Weatherspoon Art Museum, through Oct. 26, 2014. This installation of prints by Henri Matisse, all part of the Etta and Dr. Claribel Cone Collection, will focus on two aspects of the artist's favorite subject: the female form. The first group consists of seated women in interior scenes, many of them in quiet, pensive moods. The second group-depicting odalisques, or reclining nudes—is based on a long tradition in art to which Matisse added his own touch. The Harvey B. Gantt Center for African-American Arts + Culture in Charlotte, NC, is presenting 40 and Counting: Celebrating Forty Years at the Gantt Center Through Art, Culture and Community, on view through Jan. 19, 2015. Since 2009, the institution, now known as the Harvey B. Gantt Center for African-American Arts + Culture, has mounted well over one hundred exhibitions showcasing the work of more than 300 local, national, and internationally renowned artists. 40 And Counting shines a light on the organization's forty-year journey through its extensive exhibition history which illuminates the Gantt Center's rich focus on the visual arts and its influence on the arts, in general, in the Charlotte region. ### Fine Arts Center of Kershaw County in Camden, SC, Features Works by Michael Story

The Fine Arts Center of Kershaw County in Camden, SC, will present Landscapes & Jazz Greats, featuring paintings inspired by the south, the southwest and the great jazz innovators of our time, by Michael Story, on view in the Bassett Gallery, from Sept. 11 through Oct. 20, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 11, from 5-7pm.

Story offers the following statement about the exhibition, "Art and music are rooted in my family history. My great uncle and grandmother were jazz musicians and my grandfather, who was a professional artist, was my first teacher. From a very young age, I knew that I only wanted to be an artist so I feel fortunate to ily to follow that dream. Having lived in the south most of my adult life, I've often found inspiration for my art by traveling the coastal waterways and interior vistas stretching from North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. I love exploring the interconnections where land and water meet. People want to be near water, both real and imagined, as it exudes a calm that seems magical. In the studio, I've discovered that sense of calm often transcends the painting process when water is incorporated into the composition."

"This upcoming show at the Fine Arts Center in Camden includes these traditional southern landscapes combined with southwestern images inspired from a cross-country trip I took to New Mexico and Arizona," adds Story. "The internal glow of the west has become the catalyst for a re-examination of color and light in my work. Santa Fe, New Mexico and Sedona, Arizona feel like a "home away from home" for me, as both areas are now the current focus for a new body of work that I am excited to be undertaking this year."

"The final part of my Landscapes & Jazz Greats show will highlight my passion for live music by featuring portraits of jazz performers, past and present. The inspiration for these paintings began from my many visits to the Hunter-Gather nightclub in Columbia, SC. For over 17 years, Thursday nights saw live, improvisational jazz being performed there by some of the most gifted musicians in the south. As I became familiar with many of them, I started researching the others that came before them."

"In the 1950's, a new school of jazz called bebop or free jazz was formed. Drawing its musical influence from gospel and the blues, bebop tried to breath new life into the music by restoring the art of improvisation. 'Free jazz' was a music of expression- an expression of the times. The free jazz, or avant-garde movement began with the inventions of artists such as Ornette Coleman, John Coltrane, Miles Davis, Thelonious Monk, and Dizzy Gillespie. Following their lead, Archie Shepp, Pharoah Sanders, and other musicians in the 60's further stretched the boundaries of the jazz idiom by refusing to allow structure to inhibit free expression." Story says, "My drawings and paintings of these jazz performers are the beginning in a series of original works paying special tribute to the many innovators of what Dr. Martin Luther King once called, 'America's triumphant music'."

2014 Rosewood Arts Festival Takes Place in Columbia, SC - Sept. 20, 2014

For a fourth straight year, Trenholm Artists Guild (TAG) and Rockaways Athletic Club are teaming up to host the Rosewood Arts Festival on the grounds of Columbia's famous burger joint, Rock aways (2719 Rosewood Drive / corner of Rosewood Drive and Howard, Columbia, SC), for a one-day, family-friendly arts festival with free admission, on Sept. 20, 2014, from 10am-6pm.

This year, more than 100 artists from across the Palmetto State and Southeast region will showcase their visual wares, which includes traditional canvas painting, jewelry, ceramics, woodworking and even more eclectic art such as painted vegetables and windows!

This year's festival again features two stages of entertainment, featuring some of the most accomplished musicians and performers in the state. Entertainment groups include the South Carolina Philharmonic Orchestra Musicians, Town Theatre, Tom Hall & the Plowboys, Columbia Marionette Theatre, the Tonya Tyner Trio, Chase Asmer, plus student musician groups Dreher High School Chorale and the Columbia College High-Cs.

Festival sponsors include the City of Columbia (Famously Hot!), US Foods, Pepsi, Budweiser of Columbia, The State, and First Citizens Bank.

The Rosewood Arts Festival began three years ago when Rockaways owner Forrest Whitlark and local writer Arik Bjorn sat on a couple of barstools and wondered what would happen if they invited artists to show up and provided the public free admission to browse artist wares and listen to some good music.

Festival Director Bjorn thinks the idea has worked out pretty well so far, "Four years in, the Rosewood Neighborhood has demonstrated that it's perfect for hosting an annual cultural event like this. We're once again thrilled that Trenholm Artists Guild is co-hosting the event with Rockaways. And we're additionally pleased to announce a new fundraising partnership with Epworth Children's Home. Of course, none of this would be possible without our many volunteers, corporate sponsors and especially the support we receive from the City of Columbia. If our city is 'famously hot,' then the Rosewood Arts Festival is 'aesthetically hot.'

Renea Eshleman, Columbia area artist and TAG board officer agrees, "Art plus entertainment, children's activities, and Rockaway's cheeseburgers equals paradise!"

As to cheeseburgers, the Rosewood Arts Festival will award a cash prize this year to one hardworking artist for the Best Cheeseburger or Cheese Fries artwork. Other cash prizes for artists include Best Artist and Best Exhibit.

Festival vendors include well-known child face-painter Dorothee Walters. Chapin, SC, ceramics artist Sonia Neal will be making ceramics crafts with children. Columbia artists Roy Paschal and Dave Phillips will be painting portraits; plus, this year, the Dreher High School art faculty will be orchestrating the painting of the Rockaways cardboard dumpster for a little "authorized" graffiti art. Several authors, including poet Felicia Mitchell, an Emory & Henry College (Virginia) professor and Columbia native, will be selling their literary works. Mitchell is the author of the recently published volume of poetry, Waltzing with Horses.

Also, patrons are invited to bring their people-friendly pet dogs—which must be leashed and supervised at all times—to visit the Palmetto Animal Assistance Life Services (PAALS) booth. For those interested, PAALS will be doing "pooch art" with painted dog tails and paws.

The festival is from 10am to 6pm, and the admission is free.

The public is encouraged to visit and

Columbia College in Columbia, SC, Features Works by Eileen Blyth and Laura Spong

"The Big Red" by Laura Spong, 2013, mixed media, 8 feet by 16 feet

Columbia College in Columbia, SC, is presenting The Big Paint: New Works by Eileen Blyth and Laura Spong, on view at the Goodall Gallery in the Spears Center for the Arts, located in downtown Columbia off of North Main Street, through Oct. 13, 2014. A reception and artists' gallery talk will be held on Sept. 2, from 4-6pm.

The exhibition features large-scale mixed media paintings by Columbia based artists, Eileen Blyth and Laura Spong.

From the minuscule to the massive, and every size in between, artists are naturally sensitive to scale challenging their sensibilities in new and exciting ways. For Blyth and Spong, this predisposition to size was no different. "I've always heard a man's grasp should extend his reach," Spong said; "That is what I was going for. I found it very exciting and challenging to do something I had never tried before and thought that even if I didn't pull it off, I'd always be glad I tried."

After sharing their desire to paint big, Blyth decided to take action on the notion of painting in the large. In 2013, Blyth and Spong partnered on a first-ever endeavor to create works that extended well beyond their current sizes in a project simply dubbed, The Big Paint. The artists rented The Vista Studio's gallery space and procured roughly the length of fifty feet of canvas at ten feet wide. With intentions, materials, and space in place, the two artists were equipped to explore this new territory of scale.

Motivated by the complexities and rigors of working so large, The Big Paint yielded inherent challenges that Blyth and Spong found at times, trying, but equally captivating, "Having to step back and literally see the big picture of this size was new to us," said Blyth. "It is that moment of knowing, of seeing that shape or line, of finding the composition that is the exciting thing.... It was hard physical work but it was a challenge and we were addicted," says Blyth. By the end of the project, Blyth and Spong had gained an invaluable creative experience that materialized new and exciting works representative of each artist's abstract styles.

City Art Gallery in Columbia, SC, will present The Art of Kirkland Smith, on view from Sept. 11 through Oct. 11, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 18, from 5-8pm

Smith is a classical painter who began creating contemporary assemblages using post-consumer materials as an evocative way to drive home the message of the importance of reducing, reusing, and recycling. Through her work she challenges viewers to consider their consumer habits and has enjoyed working with children and adults in assemblage workshops. Native to SC, she received her BA in Studio Art at USC and received her classical training from Studio Escalier in France. Smith is a resident artist at Vista Studios in Columbia, and teaches classical painting and drawing.

Work by Kirkland Smith

In 2008, Smith entered an environmental art contest and almost by accident began creating contemporary assemblages from post-consumer materials. Using discarded objects as her "paint", she found an evocative way to deliver the message of the importance of reducing, reusing, and recycling. She found the medium connected with viewers of all ages and through it a conversation began.

Work by Kirkland Smith

Smith says, "Art can be made from anything and everything! Looking for a way to make a powerful statement about consumerism, I have learned that as an artist, I do not have to have all the answers. Through my art I can begin a dialogue and encourage viewers to ask their own questions - and come up with their own answers. We live in a disposable society and what we throw away says a lot about who we are, but what we choose to cherish and protect says even more in the end."

Smith won the People's Choice award at the 2013 ArtFields exhibition and competition in Lake City, SC, with an assemblage of Apple computer parts to make a portrait of Steve Jobs.

City Art Gallery in Columbia, SC, | South Carolina State Museum in Features Works by Kirkland Smith | Columbia, SC, Offers New Exhibit of Artists' Created Universes

Opening along with the South Carolina State Museum's new planetarium, observatory and 4D theater, the new art exhibit, Building a Universe, features creations by artists whose work deals with space and the universe, either directly or conceptually. Building a Universe can be seen in the Lipscomb Gallery through Mar. 15, 2015.

The exhibit includes artwork from 16 South Carolina artists, many of whom created pieces specifically for this exhibit. The works represent a wide variety of media, including installation art, painting, printmaking, collage, sculpture and mixed media work.

Work by Peggy Rivers

"This show is quite different for us," said Paul Matheny, director of art at the State Museum. "In the past, our exhibits

Work by Jonathan Brilliant

have been very focused specifically on the visual culture and art history of our state. These previous projects have been incredible experiences and captivating to the public. Building a Universe, however, focuses on a specific theme that is connected to the museum's capital project. The artists in this new exhibit were selected because of the quality of their work, and how it connects to the idea of space in Both totally unique and wildly diverse, the exhibit will include artworks such as: Gene Speer's series of monotypes illustrating the multiple phases of the moon; Death of Star II, Peggy Rivers's abstract interpretation of the night sky; riveting bottle cap mosaics by Molly B. Right; John Acorn's work composed of hundreds of nails hammered into plywood to create an otherworldly image; the constellation drawings of Jon Prichard, which he imagined from his interest in the peculiarity of outer space, myths and concepts from popular culture; and twinkle twinkle, a two-sided collage by the artist Aldwyth, which gives a nod to historical star charts as well as popular culture and historical art references.

Many other original pieces will fascinate museum guests, including installa-

Vista Studios in Columbia, SC, Features Works by Tish Lowe, Susan Lenz & Michael Krajewski

Vista Studios in Columbia, SC, will present Operatic Threads, a group exhibition and Jasper Magazine release party, including paintings by Tish Lowe in the Main Gallery and Threads: Gathering My Thoughts, a collaborative installation by fiber artist Susan Lenz and graffiti artist Michael Krajewski, on view in the Atrium. Both exhibits will be on view from Sept. 18 - 30, 2014.

Work by Tish Lowe

On Thursday, Sept. 18, Gallery 80808/ Vista Studios will be transformed into a unique, operatic atmosphere for Jasper Magazine's autumn release. This event is also being featured in the Conagree Vista Guild's "Third Thursday" art crawl and will take place from 5 - 9pm.

Classical oil paintings by internationally renowned realist Tish Lowe will set the stage in the main gallery. Trained at the Angel Academcy of Art in Florence, Italy and now painting in a balcony-level space in the Art Studios in the Arcade in Columbia, Tish focuses on portrait, still life, and figurative work. As she puts it, "These are the personalities found in opera. Opera is about life, about the world, about EVERYTHING." Tish is an enthusiastic member and vice-chair of Palmetto Opera, a non-profit organization bringing professional operatic experiences to South Carolina's Midlands since its debut of "Love, Murder, & Revenge" in 2003.

Work by Susan Lenz

Because the groups mission includes expanding opera's audience, the opening reception for Operatic Threads will include a one-night-only performance of highlights from Puccini's La Bohème, hits from familiar musicals such as Phantom of the Opera and Carousel under artistic director, Walter Cuttino.

Cuttino will lead a one-night-only performance of highlights from Puccini's La Bohème, hits from familiar musicals such as Phantom of the Opera and Carousel. Palmetto Opera will present an international production of La Bohème at the Koger Center on Feb. 28, 2015.

Work by Michael Krajewski

The atrium will showcase a collaborative installation by fiber artist Susan Lenz and graffiti artist Michael Krajewski. Their work, Threads: Gathering My Thoughts, will be a manifestation of the mental images and ideas that naturally flow through the human mind while engaged in the viewing of La Bohème. ## Columbia Metropolitan Airport Features Works by Susan Lenz

The Columbia Metropolitan Airport in Columbia, SC, is presenting It's About Time, a solo exhibition of found art objects by Columbia artist Susan Lenz, on view in the 3D showcases through Oct. 31, 2014.

Work by Susan Lenz

Lenz's work will include Time Signatures, a sculptural piece made from clock parts, piano keys, dominos, beer caps, and assorted common materials. Though many pieces are made using small power tools for construction, Lenz's general approach to making artwork is with a threaded needle. To that end, she is including fiber vessels filled with vintage wooden spools wrapped in yarn and embellished with embroidered stitches. These tiny gems also include thumbnail reproductions of old family photo and the suggestion of passing time. Collectively, the showcased pieces revolve around Lenz's interest in time, the narratives that are passed down through generations, and the objects that are iconic symbols of aging and life from years ago.

Work by Susan Lenz

The showcase is found in the airport's lobby and is open 24 hours a day. Future, two-month art exhibits in the space will include work by Curran Stone and P. Steele. This rotating exhibition opportunity was made possible through a partnership between the Cultural Council of Richland and Lexington Counties and the Columbia Metropolitan Airport. Sixty Midland artists responded to the call.

"The arts provide a great introduction to our area. We have such fine artists living here, and exhibiting their work to the traveling public will enhance the travel experience to the traveler and provide exposure to the artist and their work," said Dan Mann, executive director of the airport. "It's a winwin-win situation for the public, the airport, and the artist community.

Fine Art at Baxters Gallery in New Bern, NC, Features Works by Austin and Maud Boleman

Fine Art at Baxters Gallery in New Bern, NC, will present its Third Annual Pottery Exhibit, featuring "Black Mountain Studios" - artist Austin and Maud Boleman, on view from Sept. 12 through Oct. 31, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 12, from 5-8pm.

"The purpose of the work that we do at Black Mountain Studios is quite simple: it is to make objects that are pleasing to the eye and the hand, to make things of beauty, be they utilitarian, vineware, barkware, stoneware, porcelain, or our vapor glazed art pottery. If you look at one of our pieces and have a little bit of your breath taken away, or hold it in your hands or lift it to your mouth, and it feels good, it feels right, then we have achieved our goal," says Austin Boleman.

Boleman does not consider art to be some obscure, esoteric pursuit that is practiced by the extremely "gifted" and understood by few. "Art is the work of our minds and hands, is the result of the creative process, and we are all creative. How you carve a piece of wood, dig a trench, fold your laundry, or, yes, shape a spinning ball of clay all involve the creative process," adds Austin Boleman.

Boleman studied at Columbia University and the Sorbonne, where he was indelibly impressed by the stained glass in the great Cathedrals. He went on to become a stained glass artist until he was discovered by clay, and found his true passion. He studied color theory with Janet Rogers (a student of Josef Albers), and his fascination with the interplay of color and form continues to this day.

Maud Boleman's exposure to the world of art began in her childhood, visiting the museums of New York City, and continued through her studies at Nova Southeastern University, where she earned her degree in Art Education.

In the last twenty years, Maud Boleman is known as a maker of pots and a teacher of makers. Since moving to the mountains of Western North Carolina she has tried to incorporate the look of the mountains in her work. Her technique and style have developed into a synthesis of the rustic and the refined, with form and function playing an intriguing duet.

Maud Boleman has a BA in Art Education and a MS in Psychology. She taught for over 10 years at Nova Southeastern University.

Carolina Creations in New Bern, NC, Offers Exhibition That Celebrates the Farmer

Carolina Creations Fine Art and Contemporary Craft Gallery, in Downtown New Bern, NC, will present Food, Farm and Community, on view from Sept. 12 through Oct. 31, 2014. This show celebrates the work of the farmer and the artists love of the land and their community. The show features work by four North Carolina Artists, Sally Sutton, Janet Dixon, Brenda Behr, and Janet Francoeur. The show opens during ArtWalk on Sept. 12, from 5-8pm.

Sally Sutton earned her master's degree in drawing and painting from ECU in 2013 and a Bachelor's Degree from Cal State, Long Beach, CA. Her works in this show were inspired by her visits to Raleigh Farmer's Market. She also has many new works that involve the sunflower. The sunflower has a connection to spirituality and symbolizes many things. The way the flower turns to the light symbolizes a search for spirituality for her. The Chinese see sunflowers as symbolizing long life.

Janet Dixon has studied at the Cape School of Art in Provincetown, MA, as well as with several nationally known artists. Like the other three artists in this show, she works both in watercolors and oils. She concentrates on color relationships, patterns and light and shadow. Dixon loves the rural nature of Eastern North Carolina and finds inspiration for her work from her surroundings.

For Brenda Behr, painting is her second career. She earned her BFA in Communication Arts and Design at Virginia Commonwealth University, and for 33 years she worked in advertising. She studied both oil and watercolor painting at the Minneapolis College of Art and Design, and has studied with many nationally known painters since. Behr paints every day, switching back and forth between oils and watercolors. She speaks for all of the artists the show when she says that she is more likely to paint in watercolors when her painting is about the subject matter, and more likely to paint in oils when light is the subject of the painting. Cotton fields are one of her favorite things to paint in oils and each year looks forward to fall for that reason.

Janet Francoeur has a BA in drawing and printmaking from Siena Heights University in Adrian, MI. She too worked in commercial art for many years while showing her fine art in shows throughout Michigan, Ohio, and Colorado. Prior to moving to New Bern in 1989 she worked in pen and ink. Being inspired by the beauty of Eastern North Carolina in the spring she has since added watercolor, oil, and ceramics to the mediums she uses.

Full of color, this show epitomizes the beauty of our state.

NC Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount, NC, Features Works by Jack March

North Carolina Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount, NC, will present an exhibit of lifelike bird carvings by Jack March, on view at the Four Sisters Gallery of Self-Taught Visionary Art, from Sept. 25 through Dec. 6, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 25, from 4-7pm.

Born 1928 in Maine, March graduated a licensed forester from the University of Maine where he met his wife Carolyn. He then served in the US Army 1954 -56 in NYC Army Medical Laboratory after which he worked as a forester in Tennessee before moving to NC in 1971. In Spring Hope he was Woodlands Manager for Masonite, a subsidiary of International Paper. With a profound understanding of wood and a love for nature, March has been carving birds as a pastime since 1968. After he retired in 1993 he could dedicate more time to his carving.

March got serious about carving after he broke his leg in 1975; he'd be up all night carving and still be at work in the morning at the Masonite Plant in Spring Hope. A lifelong naturalist, March is a stickler for detail in his bird carvings; in fact he knows how many feathers a bird has and will make them visible in his carvings. He says his best carvings were made between 1985 and 1993. It was in the 1990s that he experienced heart problems and began to down scale his carvings; sometime he'd carve a half-size game bird or water fowl.

March uses a variety of wood types

in his carving; tupelo and juniper are his favorites. He begins carving by roughing out the basic form with a band saw, then refining with hand tools and detailing with Dremel and special knives. Painting takes real patience so as not to clog the engraved close detail; different application methods from broadstroke, four hair brush fine work to dragged drybrush to achieve the correct color and modulation. Every bird is a freestanding sculpture, so mounting involves balance and creative invention such as using driftwood as a habitat quality material.

The Four Sisters Gallery exhibition will feature March's full sized freestanding waterfowl game birds, and ducks; half-size and miniature birds will be in venue as well. We encourage admirers, March's friends, birders and fellow wood carvers to join him at his reception.

Halifax County Arts Council Offers 3rd Canvas Halifax at Celebration in Weldon, NC

Join the Halifax County Arts Council from 6 to 8pm, Friday, Sept. 26, 2014, at the historic Roanoke River Mill in Weldon, NC, for a gala celebration of the arts featuring the unveiling of the third painting in the Canvas Halifax series.

Canvas Halifax features a local artist's creation - an original piece of work that is specifically themed to the history, culture, geography or people of Halifax County. During this gala celebration event, the mystery artist will be introduced and the painting will be revealed for the first time. The original will then immediately be auctioned to the highest bidder followed by the release of limited edition, numbered prints for purchase that same evening.

The historic Roanoke River Mill (the old grist mill) is located at River Falls Park, One Rockfish Drive, Weldon NC. This event is free and open to the public. All proceeds from the auction and sale of prints are used to further the mission of the Halifax County Arts Council.

For further information check our NC Institutional Gallery listings, call the Council at 252/532-2571 or visit (www. halifaxarts.com).

The Artestry Hideaway in Beaufort, NC, Offers Works by Eileen Williams

The Artestry Hideaway in Beaufort, NC, is presenting Coastal Quilt Art, featuring works by Eileen Williams, on view through Sept. 30, 2014.

"I am very excited about the Williams exhibit," Angie Williams, owner of The Artestry Hideaway says. "This is the first fiber artist we have featured since opening at our new location. Williams has created landscape art quilts in many different shapes and sizes which showcase the beauty and colors of our coastal environment. Each quilt is made by hand and machine from the artists own photographs or from her imagination and is a one of a kind work of art. Quilting is part of our American history and we are looking forward to showing you some of the more modern ways in which quilting has transformed over the years."

Williams was born and raised in Philadelphia, PA, attended college at the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Nursing. Upon graduation, she joined the Navy and moved to California. There, she met her husband, a Marine Corps Officer, and together they have lived and travelled throughout the United States and the World. Now retired, Williams and her husband live along the Crystal Coast of North Carolina where she is joyfully engaged in her second career as a quilt artist.

Williams' interest in quilting began in the 1990's and has turned into a love affair that continues to grow. She has studied with many internationally known quilting artists and instructors to learn techniques and skills necessary for creating work that has a high standard of workmanship. That work is a process which is continually evolving and inspired by her love of nature. Williams is a Juried Artist Member of Studio Art Quilt Associated, Inc., which is a non-profit international organization dedicated to promoting art quilts.

The Seacoast Artists Guild in Myrtle Beach, SC, is Happy to Present Chair-ity, 2014

CHAIR-ity is a nationwide idea involving artists who donate their talents to create or turn seating objects into unique works of art which are sold to benefit others. These "chairs with flair" are recycled, or handmade, and vary in scale and style. Seacoast Artists Guild members have created unique pieces of art including adult and child-sized chairs and rockers, doll furniture, rocking horses, benches, stools, and such, as well as themed photographs and paintings.

Clemson University in Clemson, SC, Features Works by Teri Frame

Clemson University in Clemson, SC, will present Bodies in Process, featuring works by Teri Frame, on view in the Acorn Gallery, 2-G26 Lee Hall, from Sept. 8 - 16, 2014.

The exhibition featuring works by Teri Frame, whose performances feature covering her face in raw clay and sculpting her features into hybrid creatures, employs clay as a means for altering her body. The plasticity of this medium allows her to shift shape by sculpting and re-sculpting new flesh and skin. Greek corporeal models, which have had a tremendous influence on Western culture, were portrayed in whole-bodied, symmetrical, and blemish-free marble statuary.

The "rules" for bodily proportion were set forth by the writings of Polykleitos and Vitruvius. Frame's work explores a corporeality that diverges from such ideals. Through her work she explores how notions of beauty and proportion relate to aging, disease, disability, and genetics. Such topics have been at the forefront of philosophical inquiry for centuries. In this contemporary setting, where genetic engineering and aesthetic surgery abound, they are of specific relevance.

Clemson University in Clemson, SC, Offers Works from Clemson Architecture Foundation Collection

Clemson University in Clemson, SC, will present Decoding the Shape of Future Recollections, on view in the Lobby of the Brooks Center for the Performing Arts, from Sept. 3 through Dec. 5, 2014.

This exhibit features a survey of work exploring abstraction from the Clemson Architecture Foundation Collection show-casing a range of approaches to abstraction from figurative to landscape and from objects to architecture. Works were selected for their use of elements and principles of design as tools to assist in the decoding of meaning and content within the work. As viewers move through the exhibition the level of abstraction intensifies, requiring increased visual engagement and reflection to deduce the artists' intent.

By actively reading the visual clues, the viewer stretches their interpretation skills towards layering future recollections when engaging with abstract works of art. Artists included in the exhibition are noted southern painters: Carl Blair, David Freeman, Robert Hunter, John O'Neil, Walter Hollis Stevens and Edward Yaghjan. Additional artists: Ben Shahn, Antoine Predock, Manley, Bill Seitz and

Pickens County Museum of Art & History in Pickens, SC, Features Two New Exhibitions

The Pickens County Museum of Art & History, in Pickens, SC, will be presenting two new exhibitions including: Polly Gaillard: Framing Family, featuring works by this Greenville, SC, photographer and A World of Readers: Selections from the collection of Thomas L. Johnson. Both exhibits are on view from Sept. 6 through Nov. 13, 2014. A reception for both exhibits will be held on Sept. 11, from 6-8:30pm.

Polly Gaillard: Framing Family, asks "What is family?" Webster's defines family as "a group of people who are related to each other, a person's children, or a group of related people including people who lived in the past." How does family define us? Do we really know these people we are related to; do we understand their struggles, their quirks and habits? Who are we within the most dynamic relationships of our lives?

Polly Gaillard, now living in Greenville, SC, has taught photography classes and workshops for more than ten years. For the past four years, she has been a Lecturer of Art in Photography at Anderson University. During the Summer of 2013, Gaillard was faculty for the University of Georgia in Cortona, Italy. In the summer of 2012 and 2014 she taught for the University of New Orleans in Prague, Czech Republic. She received a Master of Fine Arts in Visual Arts from Vermont College of Fine Arts in 2010.

Gaillard has exhibited her fine art photographs nationally and has recently finished her first artist book, Pressure Points, with a forward by Jamie Lee Curtis. She recently exhibited her work at the Florida Museum of Photographic Arts in Tampa. In Jan. 2013, Gaillard's work is included in a fundraising exhibition entitled "My Aim Is True," in Santa Monica, CA, curated by Jamie Lee Curtis, which also included work from Cindy Sherman, Andy Warhol, Sally Mann, Mary Ellen Mark, and William Eggleston. Her photographic skills traverse contemporary art, documentary, portrait and traditional photographic practices.

When asked about this current work, Gaillard said, "In this exhibition, Framing Family, I've chosen to explore family through images in different ways. I investigate my relationship with my daughter post-divorce, my aging parents, old family snapshots that I've reimagined through Photoshop and lastly, selfportraits (myself as part of family or as separate than family). The different styles of investigation through the camerablack and white, color, aluminum prints and lomography images are my method of relaying feelings and questions about the moment and connection and disconnection to family. It may be murky like memory, clear and colorful as a humorous moment or in black and white abstracted where the mood is difficult to define. I believe photographing people around me gives me a better understanding of relationships and humanity; in this case my family is the exploration. I want to study the struggles, the awkward moments and my connection and relationship to these specific individuals. It also may be an attempt to hold onto the moments and never let go of them via the photograph."

Gaillard continued, "I am interested in arresting time and memories that may be ordinary, painful, poignant, humorous and/or real. I am not interested in taking photographs that belong in the family album, ones that speak of the typical celebrated moments of smiles but ones that relate to the importance and significance of the ordinariness of our lives together. I also attempt to manipulate the idea of the memory of family photos. What happens when the family snapshot is changed, does it evoke a new memory? As far as my self-portraiture as part of the family unit, I aim to understand my place within these timeless connections, who I am with them and who am I independent of them?"

Polly Gaillard: Framing Family is sponsored in part by Southern States Bank, Pickens Savings & Loan and Robinson Funeral Home, Crematory and Memorial Gardens. The Pickens County Museum of Art & History is funded in part by Pickens County, members and friends of the museum and a grant from the South Carolina Arts Commission, which receives support from the National Endowment for the Arts.

In the exhibition, A World of Readers:
Selections from the collection of Thomas
L. Johnson, some four dozen pieces, chiefly fine-art works on paper—including watercolors, drawings, engravings, monoprints, lithographs, linocuts, and photographs—all depict persons (or other creatures) in the act of reading. The figure may be shown reading a book, newspaper, letter, map, or billboard. The venue may be a home, office, library or other public building, the street, the beach—or no particular place at all.

Also represented in the exhibition are a number of three-dimensional works in wood or clay, such as North Carolina potter Ann Gleason's tall statue of "The Poet"; and a modern wooden polychrome figure of a young boy reading a book, created by an anonymous Italian craftsman. Display cases will show samples of "readers" appearing on domestic objects used for decorative, utilitarian, or celebratory purposes. The motif appears on mass-produced or limited-edition plates, cups, bookends, pencil holders, paper weights, aquarium statuary, figurines, Christmas ornaments, and other household items.

In addition to works by such nationally or internationally known artists as Robert L. Barnum, Bernard Brussell-Smith, Pierre Garcia-Fons, Ray Gloeckler, Barry Kite, Carl Kronberger, Eduard Kurzbauer, J. H. Schell, and Art Werger, the exhibition showcases those of a good number of well-known regional artists, including Jane Yarborough Creech, Daniel Cvammen, Bill Davis, Beth Regula, Sara Dame Setzer, Doris Turner, Suzanne Zoole, Joel Wilkinson, and Patti Wright.

Spartanburg, SC, and Asheville, NC, resident Tom Johnson, retired librarian emeritus and English instructor from the University of South Carolina (Columbia), has long been interested in books and reading, as well as in the visual arts. He has collected both books and art for over half a century. For many years he was a member of the advisory board of the Hub City Writers Project in Spartanburg, where he also served on the board of directors of the Spartanburg Art Museum. He continues to serve on the governing boards of Pickens County's Birchwood Center for Arts and Folklife and the statewide South Carolina Academy of Authors. He has edited and published several books, and as a printmaker currently maintains a studio at the West Main Co-op in Spartanburg.

The inspiration for this show has come from Johnson's experience as the curator for the exhibition People Reading: Selections From The Collection of Donald and Patricia Oresman, which was featured at the Spartanburg Art Museum in 2008 during its relocation to the Chapman Center there. The New York attorney and his wife, who may possess the world's largest collection of fine art organized around the theme of "the reader", loaned some sixty works of art from their Manhattan collection for the South Carolina showing. The exhibition went on to travel to art museums in Myrtle Beach, SC, and Hickory, NC.

SC Watermedia Society's Annual Exhibition is on View at Anderson Arts Center in Anderson, SC

Editor's Note: For the first time in about 20 years or more - we didn't offer our readers info about the annual members exhibition of the SC Watermedia Society. Due to health problems the person who usually would get us this info turned over publicity to folks in Anderson, SC. If I had known that ahead of time I would have looked for the info myself. The folks in Anderson have a bad habit of not communicating very well - at least with us, but I don't see much info about their exhibits anywhere outside of the Anderson area. They receive money from the SC Arts Commission which mostly comes from our tax dollars, but they don't feel they need to let us know what they are doing with that money. No wonder the Tea Baggers want to take away arts funding. We have had a long time relationship with the SC Watermedia Society and we were not going to let this go by without getting the word out the best we can - even though it comes to you rather late.

The SC Watermedia Society (SCWS) is presenting its annual juried competition, the SC Watermedia Society's 37th Annual Exhibition, on view through Sept. 12, 2014, at the Anderson Arts Center, 110 Federal Street, Anderson, SC.

The juror for the show was William Jameson, an internationally-renowned artist specializing in landscapes and residing in Saluda, NC. The exhibition features 100 of the most talented water-based media artists from across the states of South Carolina, Georgia and North Carolina. Additionally, SCWS hosted a painting workshop with Jameson at the Anderson Arts Center on June 23-25, 2014.

The exhibition will culminate with the 30-award winning entries featured in a show that will travel throughout the state of SC. The exhibit will provide public access to the "best of the best" and is facilitated by the South Carolina State Museum in Columbia, SC.

SCWS is a non-profit and IRS 501C3 corporation whose purpose is promoting the artistic and professional interests of its members and providing visual arts programs to the public. Its almost 300 members are from South Carolina, North Carolina, and Georgia.

Rosemary Moore of Honea Path, SC, is serving as the 2014 presiding officer for SCWS. In announcing the 2014 plans, she said, "Members of the SCWS represent the most talented and diverse artists in the region. The exhibition will draw many art appreciators to Anderson and to venues that will host the traveling show."

The SC Watermedia Society (SCWS) is the only statewide visual arts organization in South Carolina. It nurtures and promotes artists who work in watermedia (i.e. watercolor, acrylic, gouache, casein and mixed media in conjunction with watermedia on any surface) by providing exhibition opportunities, professional development, and educational programs. The public is provided with many quality art experiences including exhibitions and art education in the form of lectures, demonstrations, and workshops. For more than 25 years cities across the state have hosted the Annual Traveling Exhibition; more than 20,000 visitors viewed the exhibition

Furman University in Greenville, SC, Offers Works by Noelle Allen

Furman University in Greenville, SC, is presenting Trellis, an exhibit of works by Noelle Allen, Associate Professor of Art at Dominican University (Chicago), on view in the Thompson Gallery of the Roe Art Building, through Sept. 27, 2014. Allen's exhibition of drawings and sculpture, Trellis, is free and open to the public.

Allen describes her work as "experimental" and "interdisciplinary," moving fluidly between varying media and processes.

In Trellis, Allen uses a layered palette of materials – clay, plaster, beeswax, and oil paint – to render surfaces that resemble membranes or skin. In her statement Allen

Greenville County Museum of Art in Greenville, SC, Features Works by Ben Nixon

The Greenville County Museum of Art in Greenville, SC, is presenting Ben Nixon: Native State, on view through Sept. 7, 2014.

Using the 19th-century wet-plate collodion process, Spartanburg, SC, native Ben Nixon creates landscape photographs of exceptional beauty. By focusing his lens on unfamiliar terrain, he invites viewers into a mysterious, dreamlike world. Nixon is an expert technician in the collodion process, and when shooting in the field he relies on his car as his darkroom, where he develops the glass-plate negatives on site.

Because of its ability to record great detail, the collodion process was popular with photographers from the 1850s to the 1880s. The process has remained the same throughout the years. First, a glass plate is prepared and coated with collodion, a highly flammable solution of pyroxylin in alcohol and ether, which quickly loses sensitivity, requiring that the plate be developed immediately after it is shot. Once inside a traveling darkroom, the plate is dipped in a silver nitrate solution before being placed in a sealed container, which is then inserted into the camera and exposed. The glass plate is then returned to the darkroom and developed, dried and varnished, after which prints can be made from the glass plate negative.

Nixon attended Sierra Nevada College in the Lake Tahoe, NV, region and studied photography at Rockport College (now Maine Media College). Following his studies, Nixon relocated to California, where he worked for more than five years assisting photographer Jack Welpott. Nixon has also assisted Arno Rafael Minkkinen and printed for Arthur Tress, William Heick, and Art Rogers.

The Greenville County Museum of Art is located in the center of downtown Greenville's cultural campus, Heritage Green.

The series titled Native State began the summer of 2010 when Nixon returned home to photograph kudzu forests in South Carolina. The exhibition title reflects that the photographs were not only created in the artist's home state but also that his subject matter—natural landscapes and urban landscapes—is captured as it reverts to its native state. Nixon's work can be found in the permanent collections of the Santa Barbara Museum of Art and the Bolinas Museum. The Greenville County Museum of

Spartanburg Art Museum in SC to Host Artists' Guild of Spartanburg's Annual Juried Show

The Spartanburg Art Museum in Spartanburg, SC, will host the Artists' Guild of Spartanburg's 41st Annual Juried Show at the Chapman Cultural Center, from Sept. 2 through Oct. 12, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 6, from 6-9pm; the awards ceremony will take place at 7pm. Cocktails and hor d'oeuvres by Smith & Mayrose will be available.

This year's juror, Scott Belville, juried in 61 North Carolina and South Carolina artists from more than 160 entries. Belville, a professor at the Lamar Dodd School of Art, University of Georgia, has a distinguished career both as a painter and as a teacher. He has exhibited his works in gallery and museum venues in Atlanta, New York, Chicago, Washington DC, and regionally across the southeast. His art works have garnered numerous grants and awards including two NEA individual artistic grants, state individual artistic grants from South Carolina and Georgia, and a Ford Foundation grant, among others.

Belville's paintings hang in many important, public and private collections: the Georgia Museum of Art, the Walker Art Center, the Joseph Hirshhorn Museum, the Greenville County Museum of Art, the Museum of Contemporary Art of Georgia, and the Chase Manhattan Bank, to name a few. At the University of Georgia, he has received research grants from the Wilson

Greenville Technical College in Both Greenville and Taylors, SC, Features Works by Tom Dimond and Terry Jarrard-Dimond

Greenville Technical College is presenting Exploration/Resolution, featuring recent paintings of Tom Dimond and recent fiber art of Terry Jarrard-Dimond, on view at RIVERWORKS Gallery in Greenville, SC, on view through Sept. 28, 2014, with a reception held on Sept. 5, from 6-9pm. Works will also be on view at the Benson Campus Galleries, in Taylors, SC, through Sept. 28, 2014.

Exploration/Resolution implies achieving an end though investigation and process. That does define both Tom's and Terry's works but the resolution applies only to individual works. For them the exploration does not lead to a single destination but possibly the end of a cycle or series. That resolution then opens other avenues of investigation and process traveling toward yet more resolutions.

Their exploration is both personal and process oriented. Of his paintings Tom says, "The geometric figures and interplay between positive and negative forms reflect this dialogue between the inner and outer consciousness." Terry comments, "I have long considered the finished artwork as documentation of my inner thoughts and feelings and often refer to my work as interior landscapes." Both artists' works are inner conversations between a unique individual and the many processes and found objects each employs. Tom applies watercolor, comic pages, washes, acrylic mediums, inkjet transfers and more to watercolor paper to build his paintings. Terry utilizes traditional dying techniques and sewing on fabric, but also adds drawing, staining, or silk screening to finalize her works.

Tom is Emeritus Professor of Art at Clemson University since 2006. Terry worked as a sculptor and teacher for 15 years and then a designer in the textile industry. Tom and Terry live in Clemson, SC. Tom has been included in numer-

Artists' Guild of Spartanburg Features Works by Aimee Wise

The Artists' Guild of Spartanburg in Spartanburg, SC, will present Mechanisms of Resilience, featuring works by local artist Aimee Wise, on view in the Guild Gallery at Chapman Cultural Center, from Sept. 1 - 17, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 4, from 6-9pm.

A Spartanburg native with deep roots in the community, from Pine Street School to the Spartanburg Day School, Wise's return home is a palpable motif in her art. After years of producing and exhibiting in Chicago, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Colorado, the 28 year old artist is excited to present an exhibition of her own in her hometown, with a series of works, both old and new.

"Recently I have been struggling to develop a cohesive body of work, similar to developing my own story, minus all the words," Wise said. "I tend to incorporate a lot of creatures in my art. I think that the symbolism and the minute subtleties of nature can appeal more largely to the viewer than a portrait can. The factual nature of scientific illustration together with interpretative feelings derived by the viewer are common elements in my work. I gravitated towards insects, snakes, blackbirds, and particularly the lotus flower to formulate works that I felt could communicate symbolically as well as emotionally," she said.

Wise typically employs nature as a means of communicating personal artistic experiences. Her academic years at The School of the Art Institute of Chicago opened the doors to painting and drawing courses in both scientific illustration and form invention. Wise continued to cultivate biological research in her free time, as well as her time spent volunteering with insects at The Butterfly Pavilion (an invertebrate zoo in Westminster, Colorado) and handling snakes at the Spartanburg Science Center. Paintings and drawings of insects, fauna, and flora - artifacts of her continuing investigation in scientific illustration - are not merely representations of the specimens, but rich descriptions of her understanding of existence. "These narratives, found in the folds of fact and fiction, are the purest forms of truth," she said.

Work by Aimee Wise

"In preparing for this exhibition, I

Artísts' Guild of Spartanburg

relied heavily on the forms and scenes I found in nature as a means of creative expression. Some of the pieces I included in this show have been works in progress over several years; others were produced in a matter of days or even hours. The process has been very non-linear, yet profoundly organic and satisfying. I feel personal experience is one of the truest stories that someone can offer to you and these pieces visually transmit the ideas I find so difficult to articulate verbally. Works like 'The Red Lotus' and 'Coexist' are emotionally complex; these works represent a time or times in my life when I have felt pulled under or even just at a stillness. The reasons are varied and the circumstances often differ but ultimately Mechanisms of Resilience is a body of work in which I use natural imagery to tell my own emerging story."

Wise is sharing not only her interpretation of nature and the nature of man, but her personal stories, obscured and synthesized into symbolic gestures. The artist is revealing intimate relationships, love and loss, desire and rejection, comfort and inquietude, her experiences of returning home.

porary mass media. Intricately painted, decorative interiors are invented to titillate the viewer."

Myers is an artist, educator and curator. She received an MFA in Painting from Boston University and a BFA in Studio Art from Michigan State University. Her paintings and works on paper exist nationally and internationally in private collections and have most recently been exhibited at LUIS DE JESUS gallery in Los Angeles, CA, Robert Steele Gallery in NY, NY, at the Commonwealth Gallery in Boston, MA, the Katzen Arts Center in Washington, DC, the Lamar Dodd School of Art, University of Georgia, Athens, GA, Dalton Gallery at Agnes Scott College in Decatur, GA and the Visual Arts Gallery, University of Alabama, Birmingham, AL.

Converse College in Spartanburg Offers Works by Karen Ann Myers

Converse College in Spartanburg, SC, is presenting This is What Makes Us Girls, featuring a large selection of paintings and works on paper by Charleston, SC, artist Karen Ann Myers, on view in the Milliken Art Gallery at Converse College, through Sept. 25, 2014. An artist's talk will be offered on Sept. 4, at 6pm, with a reception following at 6:30pm.

Flavorwire online recently described Myers' work as "psychologically intense, densely decorated portraits examine our culture's hyper sexualized obsession with glamour and physical beauty, touching on its aesthetic extremes, seductive appeal, and emotional casualties. Each image represents a certain aspect in a sort of collective self-portrait, with her subjects inhabiting a kaleidoscope of loneliness, power struggles, cocktail dresses, and clashing patterns."

Myers says that with her paintings she is "investigating the psychological complexity of women through intimate

Eno Gallery in Hillsborough, NC, Offers Exhibition of Window Views

Eno Gallery in Hillsborough, NC, is presenting The Windows View, featuring works by 16 contemporary artists from throughout the country, on view through Oct. 19, 2014.

This intriguing theme will be represented with works that are abstract, metaphorical, and representational.

The notion of seeing is implied in the term 'window' itself, with notions of opening, showing, and light. The ordinary windows in our houses demarcate a boundary between inside and outside, between what's private and what's public. There are numerous ambiguities presented by the windows view, not the least of which is the viewer as voyeur. The window becomes a frame for its variable content, a marker of difference between what is inside and outside. Looking through the window from either side crosses a boundary. The window can also be seen as a metaphor. The intimate relation between the window, seeing, and perception has become part of our everyday language. For further information check our NC Commercial Gallery listings, or call the gallery at 919/883-1415 or visit (www. enogallery.net).

Hillsborough Gallery Of Arts in Hillsborough, NC, Features Works by Lolette Guthrie, Mark Kinsella and Michele Yellin

The Hillsborough Gallery Of Arts in Hillsborough, NC, will present Discoveries, featuring works by Lolette Guthrie, Mark Kinsella and Michele Yellin, on view from Sept. 22 trough Oct. 26, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 26, from 6-9pm.

As a landscape painter, Lolette Guthrie seeks the essence of a place in order to create visual metaphors celebrating the incredible beauty and diversity of our world. "My paintings are always paintings of light and atmosphere" says Guthrie "and I strive to capture the ephemeral nature of light at a moment in time that transcends the subject and captures a mood that is timeless." Working in both oils and in pastels she applies countless layers of pigment one on top of the other, allowing each layer to show through, giving a wonderful richness to the surfaces.

Work by Mark Knsella

For this show, Guthrie concentrated on painting skies that by themselves give the viewer a sense of space, light, time of day, temperature, and weather. In most pieces, the foreground is the accent note.

Mark Kinsella has been working with glass for more than 10 years and continues to develop his technique. Incorporating new processes into his work, he is always evolving and changing, trying new styles, and producing fresh and different work. Kinsella draws inspiration from nature, movies and life experiences, using his photography background for interesting composition and color combinations. Kinsella's work is sometimes functional, sometimes sculptural and often both.

Most of the work in this show will have a combination of transparent and opaque glass, which look very different depending on whether light is reflected off the surface or transmitted from behind. Says Kinsella, "Some of my work also contains optical illusions. Discoveries are possible in so many ways! I hope that everyone will pick up and touch the glass and feel its texture. I truly believe that working with glass is a metaphor for life. Things can be very random and seemingly disconnected but with patience, creativity, and a little hard work one can pull it all together into something beautiful. I'm motivated to leave the world in better shape than when I arrived and feel that I can do that by creating art that could possibly last hundreds of years.

Michele Yellin has this to say about her work. "Michelangelo said that every block of stone has a statue inside it and that it is the task of the sculptor to discover it. For me, searching the textured, abstracted, multi-colored surface of my canvas, I ache to discover what each painting wants to reveal to me, and thus become. This is my great challenge, and when detected and captured, my great joy. I have no luck in forcing things along. There are processes I rely on and yet I have no formula guaranteed to bring the painting into being. It is only with the alchemy of materials, skills, intent and some form of magic that allows me to discover what the painting's true nature is. To see it, I have to not look for it. I have looked in an oblique manner, and then, if I am lucky, I make my discovery. These paintings are what were waiting in the paint to be painted."

Durham Arts Council in Durham, NC, Features Works by Susan Lenz

The Durham Arts Council in Durham, NC, will present Fiber Architecture: Buildings in Stitches, featuring over twenty framed embroideries by Columbia, SC, artist Susan Lenz, on view in the Allenton Gallery, from Sept. 12 through Nov. 1, 2014. A reception will be held on Oct. 17, from 5-7pm.

Using layers of polyester stretch velvet and recycled black acrylic felt, Lenz expresses her passion for historic buildings, especially stained glass windows and the colors and eco-friendly ideals of Friedensreich Hundertwasser, a 20th c. Austrian artist and architect. Tiny squares of deep plied fabric are linked by thread as if a community seen from an aerial perspective. The same material is cut differently in order to create cathedral like windows.

The work is the result of hand-guided, free-motion machine embroidery and various melting techniques, a unique process that Lenz developed herself. She shares this process through a free, step-by-step, on-line tutorial at: (http://artbysusanlenz.blogspot. com/2007/07/how-to-make-in-box.html).

Lenz has taught these techniques in workshops at the Society of Contemporary Crafts in Pittsburgh, PA; the Studios of Key West and at Focus on Fibers in Florida; the Columbia Museum of Art; and elsewhere.

Each fiber piece builds on the last in an exploration of design motifs and stitched symbols. Visiting museums, historic house, and other travel opportunities continue to introduce new ideas for future work. The series has endless possibilities and is still evolving. Lenz's work has been presented in solo shows across the country and shown in prestigious venues like the Philadelphia Museum of Art Craft Show and the American Craft Council's flagship show in Baltimore, MD.

The pieces for Fiber Architecture: Buildings in Stitches were carefully selected to show a range of artistic expression while maintaining a cohesive look.

Similar work by Lenz is available through the Grovewood Gallery in Asheville, NC; Iago Gallery in Blowing Rock, NC; Earthwood Collection in Estes Park, CO; the American Visionary Art Museum Shop in Baltimore, MD; and at Mouse House in Columbia, SC.

Duke University in Durham, NC Offers Works by Robert Rauschenberg

Duke University in Durham, NC, is presenting Rauschenberg: Collecting & Connecting, featuring an ambitious exhibition originating at Duke in close collaboration with the Robert Rauschenberg Foundation in New York City, on view at The Nasher Museum of Art, Duke University Central Campus, through Jan.

The exhibition offers a fresh look at 34 of Rauschenberg's works spanning six decades of his career, art that he reserved in his own collection. Organized into eight sections, two gallery pavilions will feature Rauschenberg together with work by artists in the Nasher Museum's permanent collection, with special emphasis on its significant group of Russian nonconformist and conceptual art of the 1980s and 1990s, on view for the first time.

In addition, the exhibition includes

Rauschenberg fostered connections, the exhibition highlights Rauschenberg in an interchange with the unique visual vocabularies of all the artists in the show.

'We are thrilled to present many rarely viewed works by Rauschenberg and to stage his great artistic achievements in a new context with new connections," said curator Kristine Stiles, France Family Professor of Art, Art History & Visual Studies at Duke. "This exhibition is about new eyes on Rauschenberg and his dialogue with other artists of his time."

The exhibition includes painting, drawing, collage, printmaking, sculpture, ceramics, fresco, assemblage, photography and film. Rauschenberg: Collecting and Connecting was curated by Kristine Stiles, with the curatorial assistance of Duke undergraduates Lauren Acampora, Katherine Hardiman, Emma Hart, Jacqueline Samy, and Taylor Zakarin, who are authors of the catalogue and will graduate with distinction for their work on the project.

An exhibition catalogue, featuring essays by Stiles and her students, is funded by the Robert Rauschenberg Foundation.

Robert Rauschenberg (1925–2008) came to national attention in his early 20's. Rauschenberg, who was born in Texas and spent his adult life on the East Coast, began creating monochrome paintings in 1951, and by 1954, had developed his famous Combine paintings. Notoriously eclectic, Rauschenberg worked in many mediums. He considered himself a reluctant radical, making change a constant in his art, and eluding the efforts of others to categorize his style.

Rauschenberg: Collecting & Con*necting* is made possible by the Robert Rauschenberg Foundation, New York. At the Nasher Museum, the exhibition is made possible by Trent Carmichael; David L. Paletz Innovative Teaching Funds; Office of Academic Affairs, Trinity College, Duke University; Parker and Otis; and Nancy A. Nasher and David Haemisegger.

Artspace in Raleigh, NC, Offers Works by Laura Heyman, Lea Colie Wight, and Mark Brown

Artspace in Raleigh, NC, will present several new exhibits including: Render, an exhibition dealing with the figure in ways both familiar and surprising by Laura Heyman and Lea Colie Wight, on view in Gallery Two, from Sept. 5 through Nov. 1, with a reception on Sept. 5. Gallery Talks will be offered on Sept. 4, by Laura Heyman, on Sept. 4, from 6-7:30 and on Oct. 9, by Lea Colie Wight, from 6-7:30pm, and October Red, featuring works by Mark Brown, on view in Gallery One, from Sept. 13 through Nov. 1, 2014, with a reception on Oct. 3, from 6-10pm.

Render features photos and film by New York-based Laura Heyman and oil paintings by Pennsylvania-based Lea Colie Wight. Brought together, the artwork offers two distinctive and contemporary views on female identity.

The exhibition both celebrates and seeks complexity in the relationship between artists and the models they represent. Artspace has a thriving figure study program where community members, college students, and professional artists come together to draw live models every week, and Render will provide a complement to the program.

Paintings by Wight and photographs by Heyman explore the iconic relationship between the depicted and the depictor. They demonstrate alternative ways that staging and self-consciousness may affect viewing experiences.

In Heyman's series "The Photographer's Wife", the images appear to be aken by the woman's husband, but in reality Heyman embodies the role of both photographer and model. She creates a fictional dynamic between a model and a photographer, described in a video and printed journal entries that are also part of the series and the exhibition. The photos are of Heyman, but she plays the role of her invented character, and none of the images are staged in her own home, though many photos are staged in domes-

Lea Colie Wight's portraits are masterworks of color and composition, painted in a classical contemporary style. Works from two different series are on display; the first featuring one of her models, "Jenn"; the second featuring mother and child pairs that she painted during visits to a homeless shelter.

Render kicks off Artspace's season of the figure, which also includes activities at First Friday and the downtown arts festival SPARKcon, in collaboration with the NCMA.

Heyman is based in Syracuse, NY. She received a BFA in photography from University of the Arts in Philadelphia, PA, and a MFA from Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills, MI. Her work has been exhibited at Luggage Store Gallery, San Francisco, CA, Deutsches Polen Institute, Darmstadt, DE, and Light Work Gallery, Syracuse, NY, The Laguna Art Museum, Laguna, CA, among many other venues.

In 2010, Heyman was nominated for a John Guttman Photography Fellowship, and was awarded a Light Work Mid-Career Artist Grant. She has received the Silver Eye Fellowship, a Ragdale Fellowship and multiple NYFA Strategic Opportunity Stipends. Her work has been reviewed and profiled in The New Yorker, Contact Sheet, Frontiers, and ARTnews.

Lea Colie Wight is based in Philadelphia, PA. She has a BFA from the Minneapolis College of Art and Design. Since 2005 she has taught at the Studio Incamminati, an intensive Philadelphia painting atelier. She received an Honor Awards at the Portrait Society of America's national competitions in 2000 and 2010 and a Certificate of Excellence in 2011. Wight's work is represented by Haynes Galleries in Thomaston, ME, and Nashville, TN; New Masters Gallery, Carmel, CA, and Main Street Gallery, Manasquan, NJ.

Mark Brown's new series, October Red, is an accomplished group of reductive oil on panel paintings. They are his next offering after having focused on his "Winter" series for a number of years. Brown's paintings defy the easy application of outside narratives. The rigorous discipline of his paint application and the sensitivity of his mark-making continually return viewers to the present moment.

Seeing a number of Brown's paintings as a group provides subtle instruction on how to view them and perhaps other reductive paintings. In the spare compositions where he says he "limit[s] activity in the centers of the compositions," a small omission from an established pattern may become an absorbing moment of painterly

Brown also says of his work, "My approach pays attention to the properties of paint...my work is reductive because I've learned that less is more, especially given a media-saturated culture. I don't own a bell or a whistle." This solo exhibition at Artspace will be the first time that the "October Red" series is publicly on view.

Brown earned his BA from the University of Kentucky and his MFA from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. His work has been exhibited in solo and group shows throughout the US, including the recent exhibitions Independents, Greenhill, Greensboro, NC and Unscripted, Craven Allen Gallery, Durham, NC.

Select exhibition venues also include the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh, NC, Wichita State University, Wichita, KS, E.S. Vandam Gallery, New York, NY, Gallery Siano, Philadelphia, PA, and The Painting Center, New York, NY. His work is in collections on four continents. Brown lives outside Chapel Hill, NC, with his wife, artist Cathy Kiffney and their Australian Shepherd, Koz.

North Carolina Museum of Natural Sciences, in Raleigh, NC, Offers Works by Pastel Society of North Carolina

The North Carolina Museum of Natural Sciences, in Raleigh, NC, will present Horizons: Touching the Sky, featuring works by members of the Pastel Society of North Carolina, on view in the Museum's Nature Art Gallery, from Sept. 5 - 28, 2014. A reception will take place on Sept. 5, from 6-8pm.

Formerly, the Pastel Society of Orange County, the group was formed in 1996 by pastel artist and teacher Lorie Callahan along with 12 enthusiastic artists dedicated to creating works in soft pastels, with the purpose of promoting standards of excellence and to encourage use of the medium of soft pastels. Since that time the Society has continued to grow. Through their many exhibitions, the Society shares beautiful pastel creations by members and pastelists in other states. Paintings created by many Society members are in private and public collections throughout North Carolina.

For the last three years The Pastel Society of North Carolina, The Appalachian Pastel Society and The Piedmont Pastel Society have collaborated on an Annual Juried Pastel Exhibition. The 2015 exhibit will be hosted by the Pastel Society of North Carolina at the Art Shop in Greensboro, NC. This is an opportunity for the members of all three societies to exhibit their finest work.

ArtSource North Hills in Raleigh, NC, Offers Works by José Jiménez

ArtSource North Hills in Raleigh, NC, will present José Jiménez: Horizons, on view from Sept. 18 through Oct. 9, 2014. A reception will be held on Sept. 18, from 6-8pm.

The show will explore oil paintings created by Jiménez in the plein air style, where he creates a painting from within the actual landscape, rather than relying on photographs.

Following him, from his birthplace in Mexico City to his current home in North Carolina, is his passion for colors found in nature and the creative process of relaying those beautiful colors onto canvas. Since he was a young boy, Jiménez' eyes have always been open to all of the subtleties of the creative process. He loves to experiment with the aesthetics of color, and recreating his views of nature with

Work by Teri Frame

Acorn Gallery, 2-G26 Lee Hall, Clemson University, 323 Fernow Street, Clemson. Sept. 8 - 16 - "Bodies in Process," featuring works by Teri Frame, whose performances feature covering her face in raw clay and sculpting her features into hybrid creatures employs clay as a means for altering her body. The plasticity of this medium allows her to shift shape by sculpting and re-sculpting new flesh and skin. Greek corporeal models, which have had a tremendous influence on Western culture, were portrayed in whole-bodied, symmetrical, and blemish-free marble statuary. The "rules" for bodily proportion were set forth by the writings of Polykleitos and Vitruvius. Frame's work explores a corporeality that diverges from such ideals. Through her work she explores how notions of beauty and proportion relate to aging, disease, disability, and genetics. Such topics have been at the forefront of philosophical inquiry for centuries. In this contemporary setting, where genetic engineering and aesthetic surgery abound, they are of specific relevance. Hours: Mon-Fri., 8:30am-4:30pm. Contact: call Denise Woodward-Detrich, Lee Gallery Director at 864/656-3883 or at (http://www.clemson.edu/ centers-institutes/cva/galleries/index.html).

Lee Gallery, 1-101 Lee Hall, Clemson University, 323 Fernow Street, Clemson. Through Sept. 8 - "Shift and Collide: Drawings from Near and Far". The exhibit celebrates the bringing back together of four artists focused in drawing who met at Clemson University and are now dispersed geographically throughout the U.S. as careers develop and expand. While each artist has pursued a singular direction of thought and have not worked in close proximity to each other for many years, there are relationships to be found in this showcase. The drawings in this exhibition demonstrate a deep awareness of and relation to the natural, biological world. The works display drawing approaches that veer from highly sensitized systems of recording to open aggression. Transmitted are explorations of distance and proximity, the contemporary landscape, formation of matter, and systems of belief. Artists employ drawing to investigate and recompose their subjects. Former Clemson University art professor in drawing, Heidi Jensen invited three of her former students John Allen, Bethany Flagg Pipkin and Jackson Zorn to present drawings in this exhibit. These now alumni received Bachelor of Fine Arts degrees in visual art from Clemson University and all recently received Master of Fine Arts degrees from programs located in Florida, Indiana, and North Carolina. Jensen now teaches at Ball State University in Muncie, IN. The exhibit was organized by RIVERWORKS Gallery in Greenville, SC. RIVERWORKS Gallery is operated by and for the faculty and students of the Visual and Performing Arts Department at Greenville Technical College. Sept. 8 - Oct. 9 - "The African-American Voice Exhibit," includes 40 pieces of artwork from the State Art Collection by 25 African-American artists, including outsider artists Richard Burnside, Sam Doyle, Leroy Marshall, and Dan Robert Miller as well as academically trained artists with established careers such as Tarleton Blackwell, Joseph Gandy, MacArthur Goodwin, Jesse Guinyard, Terry K. Hunter, Larry Jordan, Larry Lebby, Arthur Rose, Robert Spencer, Leo Twiggs, and Winston Wingo. The Sweetgrass basket tradition is represented by Mary Jackson, the best known practitioner working in this craft, and by Linda Blake, Elizabeth Kinlaw, and Marquerite Middleton. Artists such as Beverly Buchanan, Sheri Moore Change, Connie Floyd, Merton Simpson, and Maxwell Taylor are all South Carolina connected artists who no longer reside in the state. This exhibition was organized by and made possible through the South Carolina Arts Commission. Hours: Mon.-Thur., 9am-4-:30pm. Contact: Denise Woodward-Detrich, Lee Gallery Director by calling 864-656-3883 or at (http://www.clemson.edu/centers-institutes/ cva/galleries/index.html).

Sikes Hall Showcase, Clemson University, Ground Floor Sikes Hall, 101 Calhoun Drive, Clemson. Through Mar. 27, 2015 - "Savannah River Survey: Photographs by Anderson Wrangle". Clemson University Photography professor Anderson Wrangle has followed the Chattooga River from its origin in Cashiers, NC, to its terminus in Lake Hartwell, and tracked the network of rivers and lakes in southwest North Carolina, northeast Georgia and northwest South Carolina. The Savannah River is born from these waters and begins properly in the submerged confluence of the Seneca and Tugaloo Rivers, deep under Lake Hartwell, marked by the towering presence of the dam. Clemson University is part of this watershed, landscape, and history, and is integral to its future. The exhibition was organized by Lee Gallery. The artist will give a talk about his research on Sept. 29, from 2:30 - 3:30pm. Hours: Mon.-Fri., 8:30am - 4:30pm. Contact: call Denise Woodward-Detrich, Lee Gallery Director at 864/656-3883 or at (http://www.clemson.edu/ centers-institutes/cva/galleries/index.html).

Work by Carl Blair

ALTERNATE ART SPACES - Clemson Brooks Center Lobby, Brooks Center for the Performing Arts Lobby, Clemson University, 141 Jersey Lane, Clemson. Sept. 3 - Dec. 5 -"Decoding the Shape of Future Recollections". This exhibit features a survey of work exploring abstraction from the Clemson Architecture Foundation Collection showcasing a range of approaches to abstraction from figurative to landscape and from objects to architecture. Works were selected for their use of elements and principles of design as tools to assist in the decoding of meaning and content within the work. As viewers move through the exhibition the level of abstraction intensifies requiring increased visual engagement and reflection to deduce the artists' intent. By actively reading the visual clues the viewer stretches their interpretation skills towards layering future recollections when engaging with abstract works of art. Artists included in the exhibition are noted southern painters: Carl Blair, David Freeman, Robert Hunter, John O'Neil, Walter Hollis Stevens and Edward Yaghjan. Additional artists: Ben Shahn, Antoine Predock, Manley, Bill Seitz and A. Stanick. The exhibit was organized by Brooks Center for the Performing Arts and the Lee Gallery. Hours: Mon.-Fri., 1-5pm. Contact: call Denise Woodward-Detrich, Lee Gallery Director at 864/656-3883 or at (http:// www.clemson.edu/centers-institutes/cva/galleries/index.html).

Columbia Area

Rockaways Athletic Club, 2719 Rosewood Drive, corner of Rosewood Drive and Howard, Columbia. Sept. 20, 10am-6pm - "2014 Rosewood Arts Festival". The Trenholm Artists Guild and Rockaways are hosting the 4th Annual Rosewood Arts Festival on the grounds of Columbia's famous burger joint, Rockaways, for a one-day, family-friendly arts festival with FREE ADMIS-SION. This year, more than 100 artists from across the Palmetto State and Southeast region will showcase their visual wares, which includes traditional canvas painting, jewelry, ceramics, woodworking and even more eclectic art such as painted vegetables and windows! This year's festival again features two stages of entertainment, featuring some of the most accomplished musicians and performers in the state. Entertainment groups include the South Carolina Philharmonic Orchestra Musicians, Town Theatre, Tom Hall & the Plowboys, Columbia Marionette Theatre, the Tonya Tyner Trio, Chase Asmer, plus student musician groups Dreher High School Chorale and the Columbia College High-Cs. The event is pet friendly and offers plenty of children's activities. The public is encouraged to visit and like "Rosewood Arts Festival" on Facebook to learn more. Sunday, Sept. 21 is a scheduled rain day for the Rosewood Arts Festival. For further info contact Arik Bjorn, RAF Director by calling 803/765-9851 or e-mail to (auggiebjorn@sc.rr.com).

Columbia Museum of Art, Main & Hampton Streets, Columbia. Through Sept. 14 - "Animal Instinct: Paintings by Shelley Reed". The exhibition illustrates animals in exquisite detail in the tradition of Old Master painting - but with a contemporary twist. Through Sept. 14 - "Cheer for the Home Team! Animal Mascots in the Collection". The exhibition explores the power and symbolism that animals have to rally our spirits and camaraderie. Mamie and William Andrew Treadway, Jr. Gallery 15, Sept 12 - Jan. 4, 2015 - "Tabletop Art History: Still Life from the Collection". This intimate and colorful exhibition uses 24 still life paintings from the CMA collection, including works by Roy Lichtenstein, Julie Heffernan, and Lionel Gilbert, to tell the story of American art. From polished photographic apples, to loosely, but lovingly, painted bowls on the kitchen table, Tabletop Art History offers the opportunity to see how artists can use one theme in many different styles. Along the way, we also learn the difference between realism, impressionism, and expressionism. Arrangements on a tabletop remain fascinating to artists who use everyday objects to create wildly varied images. Caroline Guignard Community Gallery, Sept. 23 - Nov.30 - "¡FUERZA! Artistas Latin@s in South Carolina". As part of the Latin@ Month celebration, Palmetto LUNA, a non-profit organization promoting Latin@ arts and culture in South Carolina, is proud to exhibit their second art show, ¡FUERZA! (Spanish for strength, force, and power), featuring 12 graphic novel-style panels. ¡Fuerza! visually explores the connections between domestic violence and the underrepresented minorities in the United States through the lenses of a cadre of Latin@ artists based in South Carolina. Collaborative work by Piensa Art Company's artists, Dre López, Sammy López, and Robert Chambers, in association with artists Ashley Berendzen, Mariángeles Borghini, and Alejandro García Lemos. Wells Fargo Education Gallery, Sept. 1 - 30 - "Main Street, South Carolina," is an exhibition of South Carolina student photography capturing "main drag" streetscapes in counties across the state. In October 2014, the exhibition travels to Washington, DC, where it will be installed in Senator Lindsay Graham's Capitol Hill offices. This is the fifth year the CMA has taken a student photography exhibition to Capitol Hill. The exhibition will be on view for approximately one year and seen by over 7000 people! BB&T Focus Gallery, Ongoing - "Southern Traditions," will showcase the richness and diversity of the Museum's collection of furniture, ceramics, silver, basketry, sculpture and paintings by artists native to, or active in, South Carolina and its surrounding states. Among the works on view will be fine silver made by Charleston and Columbia silversmiths; a sweet grass basket by Mary Jackson (SC, born 1945); wood carvings by Edgar Alexander McKillop (NC, 1879-1950); and paintings by Charles Fraser (SC, 1782-1860), Xanthus Russell Smith (SC, 1839-1929), William Harrison Scarborough (SC, 1812-1871), William Aiken Walker (SC, 1838-1921), among others. Galleries 5 & 6, Ongoing - "Modern & Contemporary Art from the Collection". Celebrating some of the CMA's greatest hits, this exhibition features over 30 paintings, drawings, photographs and sculptures from the Museum's collection that have not been on view recently. It offers the visitor experiences both serious and sensual and is designed to both entertain and enlighten. Notable works included are by Jasper Johns, Howard Thomas, Sally Mann and Edward Ruscha, whose famous image of the Hollywood Hills (on view) has become a staple of the art world. Ray Taylor Fair Gallery, Ongoing - Featuring a new and permanent installation of its ancient art collection. The installation includes approximately 50 objects that introduce the major ancient civilizations from the Mediterranean and Near East. Examples of the earliest form of writing from 12th century B.C. Mesopotamia, are shown next to Egyptian scarabs and Greek painted vessels. The world of the ancient Romans is represented by 2nd century glass and bronze items and portrait sculpture. Many of these works have not been seen since the Museum moved to its location on Main Street in 1998. The collection has grown over the last several years with the donation of 12 fine Roman sculptures in 2002 from Pennsylvania collector Dr. Robert Y. Turner. Admission: Yes. but there is no admission charge on Sun. Hours: Tue.-Fri., 11am-5pm; first Fri., till 8pm; Sat., 10am-5pm & Sun., noon-5pm. Contact: 803/799-2810 or at

Work by Ben Nixon

Greenville County Museum of Art, 420 Col-Nixon: Native State". Using the 19th-century wet-plate collodion process, Spartanburg, SC, native Ben Nixon creates landscape photographs of exceptional beauty. By focusing his lens on unfamiliar terrain, he invites viewers into a mysterious, dreamlike world. Nixon is an expert technician in the collodion process, and when shooting in the field he relies on his car as his darkroom, where he develops the glassplate negatives on site. Through Sept. 21 -"Legacy of Impressionism: Languages of Light". Impressionism, the first bombshell launched against academic tradition, defined light as color, becoming the first modern language of paint. Sun-drenched and spontaneous, the 40 American Impressionist paintings from the GCMA collection found in the exhibition invite viewers to consider the ideas and techniques that opened the door to modern visual expression. Ten future Museum acquisitions are featured in the exhibition. These paintings, each with a Southern connection, explore variations on the theme of Impressionistic light. All ten paintings are supported by the Museum's annual fundraising campaign, Art for Greenville, which culminates in a unique celebration of Greenville's generosity: the Antiques, Fine Art

Franklin G. Burroughs · Simeon B. Chapin Art Museum, 3100 South Ocean Blvd., beside Springmaid Beach, Myrtle Beach. Through Sept. 21 - "Classic Images: Photography by Ansel Adams". This is a touring exhibition from the Lakeview Museum of Arts & Sciences of Peoria, IL, in affiliation with the Smithsonian Institution. The exhibit includes /2 images, all black and white, that Adams personally printed for his daughter. It is one of his Museum Sets, a portfolio he conceived in the 1970s as the best images from his career. Landscapes dominate the group, complemented by some close-up nature works, portraits and architectural subjects. Through Sept. 14 - "Claire Farrell: A is for Art," featuring a collection of 26 mixed media monotypes, one for each letter in the alphabet. A monotype is created by drawing or painting on a blank plate and transferring the image to paper using an etching press; only a single print of each image is made. Learning one's ABCs takes on a whole new meaning when a Columbia, SC artist turns the familiar symbols into an array of whimsical images. Through Sept. 14 - "Track of the Rainbow Serpent: Australian Aboriginal Paintings of the Wolfe Creek Crater". This exhibition was organized by the University of Pennsylvania of Archaeology and Anthropology from the collection of Peggy Sanday. Curated by Dr. Sanday herself, the exhibit comprises 19 paintings which portray the Dreamtime stories of the origins of the Aboriginals' ancestral lands, with most describing the creation of the crater. Works by different artists portray subtle variations in the story, depending on who is doing the telling. Commentary by the curator explains and interprets these stories.

Through Sept. 25 - "This is What Makes Us Girls," featuring a large selection of paintings and works on paper by Charleston artist Karen Ann Myers. A gallery talk and reception will be offered on Sept. 4, beginning at 6pm. "Flavorwire" online recently described Myers' work as "psychologically intense, densely decorated portraits examine our culture's hyper sexualized obsession with glamour and physical beauty, touching on its aesthetic extremes, seductive appeal, and emotional casualties. Each image represents a certain aspect in a sort of collective self-portrait, with her subjects inhabiting a kaleidoscope of loneliness, power struggles, cocktail dresses, and clashing patterns." Hours: Mon.-Fri., 9am-5pm & Sun., 2-5pm. Contact: 864/596-9181.

Spartanburg Art Museum, Chapman Cultural Arts Center, 200 East St. John Street, Spartanburg. Sept. 2 - Oct. 12 - "Artists' Guild of Spartanburg's 41st Annual Juried Show". A reception will be held on Sept. 6, from 6-9, awards will be announced at 7pm. This year's juror, Scott Belville, juried in 61 North Carolina and South Carolina artists from more than 160 entries. Belville, a professor at the Lamar Dodd School of Art, University of Georgia, has a distinguished career both as a painter and as a teacher. Through Oct. 5 - "Daniel Cromer: A Retrospective". Cromer's distinguished career as a fine artist spans most of his life. Beginning to draw at the age of four, Cromer's work is immediately recognizable through medium and style. After living and working in New York and London as a commercial artist, Cromer returned to his roots in Spartanburg and devoted all of his time and talents to his fine art. Often working in situ, his landscape watercolors capture such places as the fish markets of New York, the rolling fields outside of Provence or rural towns outside of London, the Mediterranean coast and back to coastal South Carolina and downtown Spartanburg. This retrospective illustrates the depth of Cromer's talents and his love for painting. Admission: Yes. Hours: Tue.-Sat., 10am-5pm; Sun.,1-5pm; and till 9pm on 3rd Thur. of each month. Closed on national holidays. Contact: 864/582-7616 or at (www. spartanburgartmuseum.org).

Asheville Art Museum, 2 South Pack Square at Pack Place, Asheville. Through Sept. 14 - "Minna Citron: The Uncharted Course from Realism to Abstraction," a retrospective exhibition featuring work by award-winning American painter and printmaker Minna Citron (1896-1991). The Museum welcomes Christiane Citron, granddaughter of the artist, on June 6 at 5:30pm for a gallery talk and opening reception. Citron's New York-based career was long and distinguished. She had many exhibitions worldwide and her works are represented in the permanent collections of major museums in America and abroad. The exhibition includes 50 paintings, prints, drawings and mixed media constructions created during the course of the artist's more than 60-year career. Gallery Six, Sept. 13 - Feb. 8, 2015 - "X, Y + Z: Dimensions in Sculpture," is an exhibition of contemporary works of art, highlighting a variety of threedimensional pieces. By definition, sculpture is a freestanding work of art created either with additive or reductive methods and can be made in a variety of media. The works featured in this show are sculptural, but anchored to the wall rather than the floor. The works' dimensionality shows off various processes and materials that engage the audiences by jumping from the wall and into the gallery. These works enter the viewer's space, asking them to interact with the work in a manner different from traditional painting or sculpture. The exhibition features work from the Museum's Permanent Collection and private local collections. Maxwell Gallery, Through Sept. 7 - "Dox Thrash, An American" Journey: Georgia to Philadelphia". Born in 1893 in Griffin, Georgia, Dox Thrash served in World War I and studied at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago between 1914 and 1923. The artist lived for a time in Boston and New York before settling in Philadelphia in 1926. In 1937, at the height of the Great Depression, Thrash joined Philadelphia's governmentsponsored Works Progress Administration (WPA) Graphic Arts Workshop as a seasoned printmaker with a taste for experimentation. While with the WPA, Thrash discovered that gritty carborundum crystals, normally employed to remove images from lithograph stones, could also be used on copper plates to make etchings. The process was quickly adopted and adapted by other members of the WPA workshop, but the compelling imagery and rich chiaroscuro of Thrash's own carborundum prints have ensured that it is his name that is most closely linked with his innovative method. Holden Community Gallery, Through Oct. 5 -"Farm to Table: American Silver". The exhibition highlights different but inter-connected uses of American silver - agricultural awards and table service – as they progressed over the last 150 years. The exhibit and associated programs will enable visitors to experience the farms and tables of the region as they reflect the stylistic changes of each era. "Farm to Table" brings new meaning to the "art of eating," treating audiences to an intimate experience of handmade American silver objects celebrating our food and farms and appearing on our tables through modern times. Appleby Memorial Foundation Gallery, Sept. 26 - Jan. 18, 2015 -"Mary Frank: Finding My Way Home". Over the course of her career, Mary Frank has worked in sculpture, painting, drawing, printmaking and recently encaustic and photography, suggesting that her primary loyalty is not to a particular way of working or to any medium, but rather to the power of direct expression and to the act of creation itself. All of this work evinces an eagerness to use the intuitions and improvisations that arise naturally during the creative process. The Museum is pleased to present a her long and accomplished career. New Media Gallery, Sept. 2 - Jan. 4, 2015 - "Humans and Machines: The Robotic Worlds of Adrianne Wortzel". Wortzel utilizes computer software, robotics, video and fictive narratives to create robotic worlds filled with humanlike creatures, historical references and scientific data. She works with contributions from researchers, scientists and robotic experts from across the globe to examine the relationship between humans and machines through art. Featured in the New Media Gallery are two of her short films entitled "The Veils of Transference" and "archipelago.ch". Ongoing - "Sol LeWitt: Creating Place, Wall Drawing #618." Sol LeWitt (1928-2007) was born in Hartford, Connecticut. As a pioneer of conceptual art, he has had a major influence on 20th century American art. Ongoing - "Community: Sharon Louden". The second work in the Museum's Artworks Project Space, Sharon Louden's innovative installation Community is a continued conversation based on a series of work that she started in 2013 that traces its path through installation, animation, painting and drawing. In each genre, her gestures create an implication of dance — movement and energy - transposed against the resistance of fixed squares and rectangles of color. Admission: Yes. Hours: Tue.-Sat., 10am-5pm; Fri. till 8pm & Sun., 1-5pm. Contact: 828/253-3227 or at (www.ashevilleart.org).

Before joining the faculty at ETSU he taught at the Milwaukee Institute of Art and Design. Main Gallery, East Wing and Mezzanine Gallery, East Wing, Through Feb. 7, 2015 - "TWENTY: Contemporary Art From South Africa". As South Africa celebrates its 20th year of democracy, having made a peaceful transition from apartheid state to a new and more equitable dispensation, this show seeks to show a slice of South African existence through contemporary art. While it is in celebration of this milestone, the exhibition itself does not necessarily unpack the notion of democracy but rather looks across the scope of what it means to have been a South African over the last 20 years. The show thus explores issues of social conditions, like land issues, HIV/Aids and resistance art and juxtaposes these with more positive aspects like the Mandela years and the influence of traditional craft on contemporary South African art. Hours: 10am-6pm, Tue., Wed., Thur., & Sat. and Fri., noon -8pm. Contact: Hank T. Foreman at 828/262-3017 or at (www.turchincenter.org).

The free bus will make stops at Coffee and Crepes, Studio 180 Salon, Ashworth Village, Cary Arts Center and Page-Walker Arts & History Center/Cary Town Hall. Contact: (www.caryartloop.org).

Cary Arts Center Gallery, 101 Dry Avenue, Cary. Through Oct. 26 - "In Clothes We Remember: Jan Ru Wan". Cloths/Clothes may be one of the most meaningful objects in our lives: they wrap us when we are born, protect and decorate us in our daily activities, and cover us when we are departing from this world. Moreover, cloths and clothes also carry so much memory and emotion, and bring us a sense of security and even pride, either in our consciousness or subconsciousness. In this exhibition, installation artist Jan-Ru Wan uses silk, clothes from the past, and a variety of clothing objects to provoke responses from the viewers and resonate with their own feelings. Wan combines the multiplicity of small images, details, and forms to construct her art work by revealing the individual and the universal simultaneously. Hours: Mon.-Thur., 9am-10pm & Fri.-Sat., 9am-11pm. Contact: 919/469-4069 or at (www.townofcary.org).

Such companies as Boston & Sandwich Glass Company in Sandwich, MA; Steuben Glass Works in Corning, NY; and Libbey Glass Company in Toledo, OH, began operation and soon developed notable reputations for producing fashionable wares that were coveted by many middle- and upper-class consumers. "American Glass" showcases objects by these and other American glass companies, illustrating the variety of forms and styles that prevailed during this period. Glass-manufacturing techniques will be another focus of the exhibition, with representative examples of pressed, cut, blown, and molded glass. Nearly all of the works on view are from The Mint Museum's permanent collection of glass, which is second in size only to the ceramics collection in the museum's Decorative Arts holdings. Ongoing - "Arts of Africa". The African continent is remarkable in its geographic, social, political, and cultural diversity. This impressive diversity is reflected in the visual arts through a variety of media and forms including ceramics, masks, textiles, sculptures, prestige staffs, and shrines. With exceptional loans from private collectors and The Mint Museum's own collection of African Art, the museum is pleased to announce the expansion of its presentation of Arts of Africa, thereby providing visitors a more in-depth, meaningful, and exciting overview of African art. Heritage Gallery, Ongoing - Feature works of art, archival documents, and photographs documenting the growth and evolution of the museum, from its beginnings as the original branch of the US Mint to its founding as an art museum to the present and beyond. Ongoing · "Art for the Millions: WPA Prints" and "Carolina Clay," featuring a display of colorful wares made between 1920 and 1950 as potters from NC adapted their works to a market economy. Pease Auditorium Gallery, Central Piedmont Community College, Central Campus, Pease Lane & Elizabeth Ave., Charlotte. Through Sept. 4 - Featuring prints and accompanying text from "Denisovan," an interactive artist's book by Heather D. Freeman, associate professor of art at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. "Denisovan" is essentially a mobile app, available on iPhone, iPad and Android mobile devices, that explores the fictional imaging of a girl who died 40,000 years ago. The project was inspired by Freeman's fascination with the genomic mapping of early humans and human evolution. As a result, "Denisovan" tracks the story of bone fragments that were found in a Siberian cave. After mapping the bone's genomes, scientists determined that the fragments belonged to a previously unknown hominid. Hours: Mon.-Thur., 10am-2pm. Contact: Grace Cote, CPCC Gallery Coordinator by calling 704-330-2722 ext. 3183 or by e-mail at (grace.cote@cpcc.edu).

Cullowhee

Fine Art Museum, Fine & Performing Arts Center, Western Carolina University, Cullowhee. Permanent Gallery, Through Oct. 17 - "Gary Kachadourian: Forest /City". Kachadourian's nome-drewed datch of absurd realism takes a new route in this full-room size installation titled "Forest/City" that engulfs FAM's entire main gallery and a portion of the museum lobby. The artist is creating a processed version of the great outdoors that started with a series of pain-staking, detail-oriented, scaled-down pencil drawings and a gallery mock-up that is then scaled-up, re-produced, and mechanically printed to a huge, life-size proportion and installed on the gallery's walls and floor, engulfing the visitor and exaggerating marks, line-work, and distortions caused by the printing process. Drawing Gallery, Through Nov. 7 - "Rebecca Ringquist: Abstract Autobiography for a Fractured Narrative". Switching between the slow, gentle rhythm of hand embroidery to the more aggressive speed of the machine stitching, Ringquist creates unique personal and universal narratives informed by modern life infected by a Feminist sensibility. Snippets of text in varying styles, riots of textured color, almost stream of consciousness image making and laying, crowd these misshapen and upstretched fabrics. Star Atrium, Sept. 5 - Nov. 7 - "Teetering on the Edge of the Uncanny," featuring works by Gus Cutty, Hannah Dansie, Alli Good, and Ian Wilkinson. A reception will be held on Sept. 4, from 5-7pm. Its virtually impossible to visit any urban area anywhere in the world without finding examples of street art, both sanctioned and 'illegal'. Websites such as the long-standing Wooster Collective and the recent Google Street Art Project serve as roadmaps for accessing some of the more noted examples. For Teetering on the Edge of the Uncanny, we invited four regionally-based artists will descend on the WCU campus for several days to create live action paintings on four of FAM's huge four-sided walls, using spray paint and brushes, mixing working plans with improvisation. Ongoing -"Worldviews," featuring selections from the Permanent Collection and new acquisitions featuring regional, national and international artists' works in all media. Hours: Tue.- Fri., 10am-4pm & Sat., 1-4pm. Contact: 828/227-3591 or at (http://www. wcu.edu/museum/).

Durham

Center for Documentary Studies at Duke University, 1317 West Pettigrew Street, Durham. Juanita Kreps Gallery, Through Oct. 11 - "Hard Art, DC 1979 - Photographs by Lucian Perkins". Perkins' arresting gelatin silver and black-and-white inkjet photographs bring alive a soon-to-erupt hardcore punk scene in the nation's capital on the eve of the Reagan presidency, an enormously influential artistic and cultural movement inspired by then unknown bands like Bad Brains, the Teen Idles, and the Slickee Boys. Porch and University Galleries, Through Sept. 13 - "An Everyday Affair - Selling the Kodak Image to America, 1888-1989". The exhibit surveys 101 years of advertisements in five thematic groupings to examine the ideology of simplicity and pleasure that Kodak sold to America with its products. However, while these innovative production and marketing strategies led to the worldwide ubiquity of photography, they also may have contributed to Kodak's eventual bankruptcy in 2011. While Kodak shared in shaping our collective expectation that photography should be easy and enjoyable, their promotional strategies ultimately backfired when other companies began to simplify and glorify digital technology more effectively. Hours: Mon.-Thur, 9am-7pm; Fri., 9am-5pm; Sat., 11am-4pm; & Sun., 1-5pm. Contact: 919/660-3663 or at (http://documentarystudies.duke.edu/).

The Nasher Museum of Art, Duke University Central Campus, 2001 Campus Drive, Durham. Through Jan. 11, 2015 - "Rauschenberg: Collecting & Connecting," featuring an ambitious exhibition originating at Duke in close collaboration with the Robert Rauschenberg Foundation in New York City. The exhibition offers a fresh look at 34 of Rauschenberg's works spanning six decades of his career, art that he reserved in his own collection. Organized into eight sections, two gallery pavilions will feature Rauschenberg together with work by artists in the Nasher Museum's permanent collection, with special emphasis on its significant group of Russian nonconformist and conceptual art of the 1980s and 1990s, on view for the first time. Sept. 14 - Feb. 22, 2015 - "Miró: The Experience of Seeing". The exhibition presents a rare glimpse at the later works of Spanish-born artist Joan Miró (1893-1983), one of the greatest innovators of 20th-century art in Europe. This is the first-ever presentation of the final 20 years of Miró's career. Don't miss the only East Coast venue for this special ticketed exhibition. All works are on loan from the Museo Maciona Centro de Arte Reina Sofia, Madrid, Spain. In 1956, Miró moved to a new studio on the island of Mallorca, Spain. Here the artist could, for the first time, gather together and reflect on decades of his work. For the remainder of his life, Miró underwent a period of tremendous productivity in painting, printmaking and sculpture. The exhibition reveals a tireless creativity and an intimate connection to nature and the human figure. Come and discover this joyous and inspirational late work by one of the great masters of 20th century art. Through Feb. 12,, 2016 - "New Collection Galleries". To celebrate the Nasher Museum's 10th anniversary, we will showcase our exciting and fast-growing collection. The Nasher Museum is evolving—from presenting great exhibitions to also presenting our strong collection. It has grown by more than 1,000 works of art in 10 years, and has helped the museum to become a key player in the international art world. One gallery pavilion, freshly reconfigured, will display the best of the historical collection, telling the story of art history through nine distinct spaces. Those installations will feature classical antiquities, medieval art, early American (Pre-Columbian) art, European and American paintings and sculpture, modern art and African art. A second gallery pavilion will feature the museum's contemporary collection, allowing for frequent and lively change-outs as new acquisitions arrive. The Nasher Museum will reaffirm its position as the keystone of the arts at Duke University with an emphasis on undergraduate education and opportunities for undergraduate student-curated installations. Also - Nasher Museum Café and Museum Shop. Admission: Yes, but free to Durham residents, courtesy of "The Herald-Sun" newspaper. Hours: Tue.- Sat., 10am-5-pm; Thur. till 9pm; & Sun., noon-5pm. Work by Harriett Hoover

GreenHill, a space for NC art, 200 North Davie Street, Greensboro Cultural Center, Greensboro. Through Sept. 6 - "Light on China," features photographs by Jerome De Perlinghi, Joe Lipka, Bill McAllister, David M. Spear, and Barbara Tyroler - five photographic artists who have traveled to China and through their lenses have captured the sights, textures, nuances, shadow and light they found there. Curated by Edie Carpenter, the exhibition will facilitate a dialogue around generally received notions and mythology surrounding China and contemporary visual representations of the globe's most powerful emerging economy. Carpenter says, "This exhibition presents the photographic explorations of five prominent North Carolina-based photographers whose collective interest in the Far East composes a rich and varied view of contemporary China. People in urban settings are the subjects of the works of Jerome De Perlinghi and Barbara Tyroler, while David M. Spear presents images from a visual voyage up the Yangtze River. Joe Lipka and Bill McAllister's exquisite landscape subjects tell stories of a country where past and present overlap." The exhibit provides the artists a platform with which to share their perspectives of their journeys in China, capturing images of people and landscapes in urban cities to remote villages. Greenhill visitors will see landscapes of striking abstract beauty and reflections of the day-to-day. Sept. 19 - Nov. 9 - "Following Threads: Fiber Art and Drawing," highlights four artists, Harriet Hoover, Becky Joye, Leigh Suggs, and Jason Watson, who investigate the drawn and stitched line in figurative and abstract works that stretch the definitions of drawing. A reception will be held on Sept. 19, from 6:30-8:30pm. Hoover, Joye, Suggs and Watson all have artistic practices that embrace several mediums, producing studio drawings as well as works utilizing fiber, collage, hand and machine sewing, and installation. Thematic threads link their graphic and fiber work as well as their multidisciplinary approaches which explore personal narrative spaces. Hours: Tue.-Sat., 10am-5pm; Wed. till 7pm; and Sun., 2-5 pm. Lesley Dill, "Faith & The Devil," 2011-2012 (installation view), acrylic paint, oil pastel, silver leaf, gold leaf, mixed media on cotton panel. Courtesy of the artist and George Adams Gallery, New York.

Weatherspoon Art Museum, University of North Carolina - Greensboro, Cone Building, Tate and Spring Garden Streets, Greensboro. The Gregory D. Ivy Gallery & The Weatherspoon Guild Gallery, Through Oct. 12 - "Shouts of Joy and Victory: Jewish and Christian Imagery from the Collection". Given the subject of this exhibition, it may surprise some visitors to learn that the art on display was made in the twentieth century. Rather than icons, or venerations of images per se, the works focus on subjects that incorporate either Christian or Judaic references, themes, or associations. Ranging from illustrations of Biblical passages and images of religious figures to amalgams of scripture, social consciousness, and pure abstraction, the objects have larger meanings than the images themselves. For example, William Gropper's print "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" not only refers to a Biblical passage and beloved hymn, but also may denote the 19th-century resistance movement that transported slaves from the American South to the North. Rufino Tamayo's image of the "Virgin of Guadalupe" celebrates Mexico's most popular religious and cultural icon and also asserts her presence in daily contemporary life. Regardless of viewers' religious or cultural practices, the spiritual facets of these modern works of art should be readily apparent to all. The Leah Louise B. Tannenbaum Gallery, Sept. 6 - Dec. 7 - "Al Held + Robert Mangold: B/W to Color". How do artists learn from and influence one another? This exhibition explores the relationships between the work of American abstract artists Al Held and Robert Mangold in the 1960s and onwards. Intensely interested in working within the language of geometric abstraction to challenge notions of perspectival space, from 1967 to 1977 Held devoted himself to creating large-scale, black & white paintings. At that time, the younger artist, Mangold, focused on combining line with geometric planes of color to similarly explore the possibilities for creating dimensionality and depth. The exhibition, which is culled from the Weatherspoon's permanent collection, features important paintings from this period, as well as others dating through 1992. The Louise D. and Herbert S. Falk, Sr. Gallery, Sept. 13 - Dec. 7 - "Lesley Dill: Faith & The Devil." Working in sculpture, drawing, photography, and performance, Lesley Dill uses a variety of media to explore themes of language, the body, and transformational experience. Her large-scale installation. The exhibit investigates the philosophical and existential conundrums of evil and underlying faith in the world. Gallery 6, Through Oct. 26 - "Matisse and His Muses".

This installation of prints by Henri Matisse, all part of the Etta and Dr. Claribel Cone Collection, will focus on two aspects of the artist's favorite subject: the female form. The first group consists of seated women in interior scenes, many of them in quiet, pensive moods. The second groupdepicting odalisques, or reclining nudes—is based on a long tradition in art to which Matisse added his own touch. McDowell Gallery, Sept. 27 - Dec. 14 - "Art on Paper 2014: The 43rd Exhibition". A preview party will be held on Sept, 27, from 6-9pm (tickets required). Thirty-four regional, national and international artists have been chosen to present unique works using paper as their primary medium. The exhibit was organized by Curator of Exhibitions Xandra Eden. Various curators throughout the years have approached the "Art on Paper" exhibitions in different ways. This year, Eden chose to select fewer artists than in the past so that audiences would have the opportunity to get a more indepth understanding of each artist's work. Artists were selected through a submissions process and by invitation. Atrium and Lobbies - Featuring works of art complementing current gallery exhibitions which are rotated in the atrium and public areas throughout both floors of the gallery. Tom Otterness' site-specific work, "The Frieze" is permanently installed in the atrium. Sculpture Courtyard - Featuring selections of American sculpture from 1900 to the present from the Weatherspoon Collection and on loan works from contemporary artists. Admission: Free. North Carolina Museum of Art, 2110 Blue Ridge Road, Raleigh. East Building, Level B, Through Dec. 7 - "Sacred Motherhood: Motherand-Child Representations from the Permanent Collection," a free exhibition featuring works from ancient Egypt to the 21st century. The exhibition includes artifacts, paintings, sculpture, ceramics, photographs, and lithographs that depict mother and child. The 13 works in the exhibition examine multiple facets of motherhood—from pregnancy to the pain of separation at death. North Carolina Gallery, Through Mar. 8, 2015 - "Line, Touch, Trace". Organized by Greenhill in Greensboro, NC, the exhibition highlights handdrawn works by 13 North Carolina artists who use graphite, ballpoint pen, conté crayon, ink, or charcoal to explore drawing in its relationship to thought processes. Line may be used to precisely render contours or as calligraphy on the drawing's surface; touch builds tonal values or erases edges; and traced marks may suggest elements of an imagined topography. The artists use line, touch, and trace in works that communicate mental states, project invented worlds, or portray moments of contemplation. The range of approaches presented attests to the effervescence of drawing and its contribution to contemporary art. West Building, Ongoing - Featuring 10 additional sculptures by the celebrated French artist Rodin on Ioan from Iris Cantor's private collection. Ongoing - "John James Audubon's The Birds of America". Work by Richard Ritter

Waterworks Visual Arts Center, 123 E. Liberty St., Salisbury. Through Sept. 6 - "T3: Textile · Text · Texture," investigates the value of communication, linking literacy with visual imagery. Through large-scale fiber and mixed media installations, two North Carolina artists, Peg Gignoux and Leslie Pearson, present a spectacular and intimate array of artwork, unveiling personal stories through their work. Each piece is a unique exploration of beautiful techniques – some are layered and stitched while others are sculpted and collaged to create multi-dimensional art forms. Each represents the diversity of fibers and repurposed materials, and imparts narrative messages. Peg Gignoux is a textile artist based in Carrboro, NC, who creates vibrant fiber and mixed media works and handmade books. She has the remarkable ability to transform simple pieces of fabric into cohesive and meaningful works of art. Leslie Pearson, Leland, NC, is a multimedia artist who utilizes many fiber-based materials, processes and techniques to create sculptures, installations, encaustic paintings and handmade books, in which she explores themes of memory and identity. Sept. 13 - Jan. 31, 2015 - "Spaces Within," explores the human experience through the lens of selfhood. This exhibition showcases clay, wood, and bronze sculptures by international artist Maria Michaelson, and a selection of glass artwork from the collection of Sonia and Isaac Luski, which is on loan from Foundation For The Jarolinas. Having spent years traveling in vyest Africa, India, Central and South America, Europe and Australia, Michaelson draws from traveling openly, trying to understand what it is like to live in different paradigms, with different beliefs. For nearly forty-seven years, the Luskis have collected artwork from around the world. Every room in their Charlotte home is filled with contemporary, intricate glass pieces as well as paintings and sculpture from renowned artists. The Luskis purchase only the art that they love and are among Charlotte's premier arts patrons and philanthropists. Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, 750 Marguerite Drive, Winston-Salem. Through Oct. 5 - "Neil Goldberg: Anthology," curated by Cora Fisher. Throughout his work, Neil Goldberg turns his gaze to the structure of time and the mechanisms of empathy, taking as his subject the overlooked, seemingly repetitive, and interstitial moments and faces of everyday life. Goldberg has made artworks with his parents as collaborators and with complete strangers he approaches on the street. At turns both conceptual and deeply personal, Goldberg's video, photography, and performative interventions follow a postmodern inclination towards seriality and isolate moments so they can become meditative specimens of ordinary experience." The exhibition will assemble a mini-retrospective of previous bodies of work, include new work made for the exhibition, and launch an interactive public presentation format that shares his artistic process. A dedicated week-long, interdisciplinary workshop between the artist and UNCSA students in Dance will be folded into this live public presentation, demonstrating SECCA's unique partnerships within Winston-Salem's institutions and its support of contemporary art production. Potter Gallery, Through Sept. 15 - "Claire Harvey: Daily Measures". Harvey's observational drawings transform everyday experience into fascinating microcosms, ranging in scale from miniature portraits to larger-than-life wall projections. The exhibition explores the relationship between subject, object, and medium through Harvey's revelatory drawings. The artist repurposes everyday materials such as glass slides, sticky-tack, Scotch tape and Post-it notes to serve as portable canvases. Tiny yet expansive, these images depict familiar and fleeting daily scenes and passersby. When viewed together, they create unexpected connection and meaning. Hours: Tue.-Sat., 10am-5pm, Thur. till 8pm; Sun., 1-5 pm, and closed Mon. & state holidays . Admission is free. Contact: 336/725-1904 or at (www.secca.org).

Work by Bill Cooper

Gallery C, 540 North Blount Street, Raleigh. Through Sept. 17 - "Under the Big Top: The Art of the Circus". A reception will be held on Aug. 1, from 6-9pm. The Big Top, The Greatest Show on Earth, these phrases take you back to a time of childhood innocence and wonder. Who hasn't been seduced by the spectacle, fun, and danger of the exotic world of the circus? Gallery owner Charlene Newsom brings together 16 artists, ranging from early 20th century to today, who illustrate aerialists, acrobats, jugglers, clowns and sideshow freaks. Sept. 5 Oct. 7 - "Photography by Bill Cooper". A reception will be held on Sept. 5, from 6-9pm. Cooper grew up in rural Pennsylvania and moved to Raleigh in 2013. His eclectic subjects range from still life and the natural landscape to gritty urban scenes. Cooper's photographs are much more than the recording of a moment. Rather, his works present a odd or offbeat viewpoint, and they command the viewer to let go of their unconscious "screeners" to see that which usually goes unnoticed. The exhibition consists of fifteen works including color and black and white methods. Hours: Tue.-Fri., noon-6pm; Sat., 11am-5pm; and Sun. 1-5pm.. Contact: 919/828-3165 or at (www.galleryc.net).
