Editorial COMMENTARY

by Tom Starland, Editor and Publisher

Are We Having Fun Yet?

This Pandemic is starting to act like the Aunt and Uncle who won't leave after Thanksgiving dinner. You're waiting to see the big ball game (what ball game?) and they're still talking about the new wallpaper they put up in their living room. You know the one, where they have clear plastic covers over all their furniture.

Or it's like that movie you keep catching while you're surfing channels. You've seen the middle a hundred times, but never the beginning or the very end, but you just can't pass it by thinking that this time you'll see the end - knowing something will draw your attention away before the end comes.

I used to think my life was kind of boring before the Pandemic came along, but now I just can't remember what I did two days ago. Or was it what I think I'll be doing tomorrow? I can't remember.

Waiting for it to just all go away like a miracle is like waiting to win the lottery, especially when you don't buy any lottery tickets.

Waiting For the Dam to Break

I'm used to waiting - waiting for Christmas, waiting for my team to win the Super Bowl, waiting for a toothache to go away, waiting for a hurricane to turn out to sea, waiting for our monthly deadline, or waiting for someone to answer a question I sent them an e-mail about.

Ever since the Pandemic hit and shut down most of the visual art activities in the Carolinas, I've been waiting for the dam to break on press releases. Every month, about a week before our deadline, the 24th of the month prior to the next month's issue (Sept. 24th for the Oct.

issue), I keep thinking that I'm going to open my e-mail and the flood gates will have opened and the press releases will spill all over me. That hasn't happened yet.

I thought for sure September would be the month, with colleges and universities opening and artist guilds coming off their Summer breaks, but it didn't happen. We're still in the age of indecision. Getting people to wear masks and staying apart from each other should have done the trick, but it hasn't happened yet. It's a simple solution which I thought the art community could handle, as art spaces usually are not that crowded in normal times, except for receptions, and many facilities have switched from receptions to all day drop ins.

Sorry to complain about all the waiting, but you can be sure, when that dam does break, I'll complain about the overload just as well, but I'll have a smile on my face and so will most of you again.

You Get Your Art Stimulus Check in the Mail Yet?

I haven't gotten mine, but I'm sure it's in the mail. Oh right, that might be the problem. It seems someone is fixing the mail by shutting a lot of it down. I guess that's like testing - the less you test, the less you know who has COVID-19, therefore less people must have it. Problem solved. Well, I'm not waiting for any check to help out the arts - at least not the commercial side of the arts, the side that makes money, hires more people, and pays more taxes. When times get tough, we don't get helped, we're asked to help others in the arts out. It doesn't make sense, but we do it anyway. Some things never change. Hang in there, folks.

Redux Contemporary Art Center in Charleston, SC, Offers Group Exhibit

Redux Contemporary Art Center in Charleston, SC, will present Frontyard, Backyard, Street, featuring works by Christian Birk, Susan Gregory, Dontré Major, Hirona Matsuda, and Alex Waggoner, on view from Sept. 11 through Oct. 24, 2020.

Redux's group exhibitions present the public with an opportunity to better understand, and engage with, the work of a collaborative unit of artists who strive to produce a cohesive, shared statement.

Frontyard, Backyard, Street, a group exhibition offering reflections on urban Charleston, invites the neighborhood to share five artist's sense of place in their city landscapes. The artists use a variety of media to depict their interpretation of a watermark in time. The surrounding street blocks team with energy and layers of stories as the hustle of the day transpires. Works use this visual language as theme, celebrating the vibrancy, while also considering the inevitable change of our city landscape. The artists consider: What is the character of Charleston? What is it that is precious and what history is necessary to protect and tell?

Christian Birk is a painter currently based in Columbia, SC. Birk earned BAs in Studio Art and Art History from the College of Charleston (2016). Birk has shown work in the Halsey Institute's juried exhibition Young Contemporaries (Charleston), with GHOST Art Project (Omaha, NE), and at Redux Contemporary Art Center (Charleston).

Susan Gregory is a multidisciplinary artist who paints in mixed media and encaustic, designs and makes functional pottery under the line ceramic scg and occasionally creates public art installations. She earned a BFA in Painting and Ceramics at Western Carolina University (2000), where she has a piece in their permanent collection. In 2009, Gregory furthered her art education with Encaustics at the Penland School of Craft (NC). After years in Denver, CO, and San Francisco, CA, she returned to her native state in 2016. The artist has shown locally and nationally with recent exhibitions including ArtFields 2019 and the street sign instrumental public art piece, XYLO-PLAY, on Upper King Street, Charleston. She is currently developing Studio Union, a collective professional art space for ceramics and mixed media in the Neck of the Charleston peninsula.

Dontré Major, originally from Oklahoma, moved to Charleston in 2015 where he attended and received a BA from the College of Charleston's Studio Art program with a concentration in photography. While attending C of C he was accepted to show in the juried Young Contemporaries exhibitions in 2016, 2017, 2018; in the 2018 show he won two awards, the Norton M. Seltzer Prize and The Laura M. Bragg Memorial Award as well as receiving the title Best in Show. After graduation, in 2018, Major was also a part of the Charleston Gaillard Center "Prints in Clay" exhibition which focused on the history of enslaved Africans and the fingerprints they left behind. In 2019 he also showed work in the "Enhancing African Descendant Identity through Community Engagement and DNA Analysis," which was a project in collaboration between The Gullah Society and Redux Contemporary Art Center. In the winter of 2019 he finally had his first solo exhibition at Redux.

Hirona Matsuda creates immersive environments that evoke her felt experience of a specific time or place. She has kept a studio in downtown Charleston since 2006 and has collaborated with a number of local artists and arts organizations in those years. As the city has changed, so has the way Matsuda relates to different parts of town and the creative community. The fluctuation of the inhabitants and the cycle of decay and development is a constant source of subject matter as well as the actual material to use in the work. By often repurposing natural and manufactured materials found on site, she brings actual pieces of the environment into the work. Because of our shared human experience, people can often relate to the work on a common emotional or nostalgic level.

Alex Waggoner graduated from Savannah College of Art and Design with a BFA in Painting and Printmaking in 2012. In 2014, she was one of the Regional Emerging Artist in Residence at Artspace in Raleigh, NC. She was included in New American Paintings No. 118 in 2015 and was awarded Best In Show at the 2017

Piccolo Spoleto Juried Art Exhibition. During the summer of 2018 she was the Artist in Residence at the Gibbs Museum of Art in Charleston. She moved to Atlanta, GA, in September of 2019. She is currently a studio artist at MINT in Atlanta.

Redux Contemporary Art Center is a nonprofit organization committed to fostering creativity and the cultivation of contemporary art through diverse exhibitions, subsidized studio space for visual artists, meaningful education programs, and a multidisciplinary approach to the dialogue between artists and their audiences.

Redux Contemporary Art Center in Charleston, SC, Features Works by Gret Mackintosh

Redux Contemporary Art Center in Charleston, SC, is presenting Connections, featuring works by Gret Mackintosh, curated by Mia Loia, on view in Gallery 1056, through Oct. 24, 2020.

con-nect-ion, noun
1. a relationship in which a person, thing, or idea is linked or associated with something else.

In this body of work, Mackintosh explores connections within lowcountry landscapes. Physical connections between places, such as waterways, roads, bridges, and paths, and emotional connections to places centered around certain events or special places frequented over the past 15 years living in Charleston.

Maps provide a universal language, unique to each viewer. While visually illustrating the relationships between places from an aerial view they also show the ties of communities, marking the points of importance for the region they depict.

Created during a time of both social and personal upheaval, this collection of paintings serves as a reflection on both the literal and figurative ties that link us together in the human experience. Links that bond us to the lands we call home, and to the people who make it so. Connected, even while apart.

Originally from Burlington, NC, Mackintosh attended the College of Design at North Carolina State University, where she earned a Bachelors in both Landscape Architecture and Art & Design. After graduation, she moved to Charleston to begin her career as a landscape architect while continuing to pursue painting on the side. In 2018, she made the leap into a career as a full-time artist.

In her current work, her experience in both landscape architecture and living life on the coast, play a large role. The subject matter often involves exploring aerial landscapes and waterways, both natural and man-made patterns and their connections. She creates paintings that fall somewhere between large scale maps and landscape renderings.

Mackintosh lives in Charleston and works out of her studio at Redux Contemporary Art Center.

Wells Gallery at The Sanctuary Resort on Kiawah Island, SC, Offers Group Exhibition

The Wells Gallery at The Sanctuary Resort on Kiawah Island, SC, is presenting Reflections, a group show of works by gallery artists, on view through Sept. 21, 2020.

The latest group show at Wells Gallery features over 30 new pieces exploring the concept of Reflection. The art in this collection demonstrates literal reflective surfaces, and the theoretical reflection of one's self in the art. We have curated a body of work that encourages the viewer to take time to reflect.

When interacting with art, developing an iterative process that explores where you've been, where you are, and where you want to go, holds immense value. Pausing to reflect helps guide this journey. A painting that embodies a feeling, or a painting that demonstrates a physical reflection of light, is a tangible reminder to take a moment to reflect on your day, on yourself, or on the direction of your life. It is said that what we focus on outside is a reflection of what we feel inside. It is important to have beautiful objects around us so that we may reflect the beauty we see.

The Johnson Collection Gallery in Spartanburg, SC, Offers Exhibit Focused on Southern Women Artists

The Johnson Collection Gallery in Spartanburg, SC, is presenting Pursuits on Paper, featuring works by Southern women, on view through Oct. 3, 2020.

Two characteristics intersect in this exhibition. Each object is a work on paper, executed in a variety of media including watercolor, pencil, pastel, and various forms of printmaking. The second commonality is that all the pieces were created by female artists with ties to the South, a characteristic consistent with TJC Gallery's Year of the Woman initiative.

Whether native-born, permanent resident, seasonal visitor, or tourist, each artist represented was influenced, to varying degrees, by her time in the South. Some of these women chose to depict subjects that are quintessentially regional—such as the city of Charleston—while others explored more universal themes, and a few embraced abstraction.

Spanning the years 1900–2007, this selection—featuring works by Anni Albers, Sarah Blakeslee, Beverly Buchanan, Margaret Burroughs, Caroline Durieux, Minnie Evans, Edna Hopkins, Anita Jordan, Gwendolyn Knight, Samella Lewis, Corrie McCallum, Clara Parrish, Nellie Mae Rowe, Rosina Sherwood, Alice Smith, Anna Taylor, Grace Taylor, Alma Thomas, Elizabeth Verner, Amelia Watson, and Mary Whyte—underscores the evolution of creative, critical, and commercial opportunities increasingly available to women artists in the twentieth- and early twenty-first centuries.

In earlier years, women's artmaking was often seen as more pastime than profession, a hobby explored in shared rooms during fragments of time between domestic duties. Working on small-scale sheets of paper required little physical space, the cost of watercolors and pastel crayons was modest, and their application less messy than oils. In contrast, printmaking, in all its forms,

Work by Elizabeth O'Niell Verner requires a variety of tools and surfaces—metal, wood, or stones—along with a press, a complexity rewarded in multiple copies.

Beginning in the late eighteenth century, Southern manufacture of pulpwood and paper began a steady ascent to national significance. Benjamin Waring of Columbia, SC, wrote to a friend in 1806, "I suppose you have heard of my erecting a Papermill," the first mention of the industry in the state. By the early twentieth century, diminishing natural resources in the North propelled the growth and success of Southern production, Southern market share rose from one percent circa 1900 to a height of approximately fifty percent in the 1950s, making paper an economic engine for a New South.

This exhibition is guest curated by independent art historian and author Martha Severens. She has served as curator of the Greenville County (South Carolina) Museum of Art; the Gibbes Museum of Art in Charleston, SC; and the Portland (Maine) Museum of Art.

Wofford College in Spartanburg, SC, Features Art of Southern Women from The Johnson Collection

Wofford College in Spartanburg, SC, will present Central to Their Lives: Southern Women Artists in the Johnson Collection, critically acclaimed, nationally touring exhibition, on view at The Rosalind Sallenger Richardson Center for the Arts, from Sept. 7 through Dec. 18, 2020.

Spanning the decades between the late 1890s and early 1960s, Central to Their Lives examines the particularly complex challenges Southern women artists confronted in a traditionally conservative region during a period in which women's social, cultural, and political roles were being redefined and reinterpreted.

After opening at the Georgia Museum of Art, Athens, the exhibition traveled to the Mississippi Museum of Art, Jackson, the Huntington Museum of Art, West Virginia, the Dixon Gallery and Gardens, Memphis, Tennessee, and the Gibbes Museum of Art, Charleston, SC. The Rosalind Sallenger Richardson Center for the Arts at Wofford College in Spartanburg—the Johnson Collection's hometown—is the fifth stop on the exhibition's six-state, three-year tour.

Among the works on view, several are of local interest: Wenonah Bell's Peach Packing, Spartanburg County captures the importance of women to South Carolina's thriving peach industry during the 1930s and 1940s, and works by Spartanburg natives Margaret Law, Josephine Couper, and Blondelle Malone speak to the artists' indelible legacy in their hometown and beyond.

Published by the University of South Carolina Press, the exhibition's companion catalogue is composed of six lead essays and forty-two artist entries written by experts in the field of Southern art. Lavishly illustrated with more than eighty color images, the volume also includes a foreword written by Sylvia Yount,

An appendicular directory lists more than two thousand female artists who were professionally active in the South between the late 1880s and 1960. Central to Their Lives: Southern Women Artists in the Johnson Collection is available for purchase via Spartanburg's independent bookseller Hub City Bookshop.

Hailed by The Magazine Antiques with having staged a "quiet art historical revolution" and expanding "the meaning of regional" through its "exhibitions, loans, publications, and institutional partnerships," the Johnson Collection seeks to illuminate the rich history and diverse cultures of the American South. Artists Collective | Spartanburg, SC, Features Works by Carol Story

The Artists Collective | Spartanburg, SC, will present Sans Verde, featuring works by Spartanburg artist, Carol Story, of nature without using the color green, on view from Sept. 1 - 26, 2020.

As an artist recognized for her southern landscapes and nature-based still-lives, Carol Story normally uses a lot of green oil paint on her canvases. But the color green will be hard to find in her latest collection of work, Sans Verde.

day through Saturday, 10am until 4pm. However, because of the COVID-19 pandemic, exhibition hours may change without notice, and the public should refer to the facility's website (ArtistsCollectiveSpartanburg.org) for the most current information. However, the Collective supports the Spartanburg Area Chamber of Commerce's "Bringing Back the Burg" initiative and abides by all COVID-19 precautions. The public is invited to see this exhibit by staying socially distant from each other (six feet apart) and wearing a required face covering.

Despite the lack of green, Sans Verde (Spanish for "without green") will showcase a wide variety of subject matter - rural scenes, travel memories, sunsets, florals, animals, marshes, and mountain vistas--presented in her characteristic representational style that leans toward impressionism. "I seek to represent what I see, as well as my response to it," Story said.

"This exhibit is the result of a self-imposed challenge, which has pushed me as a painter and taught me a great deal about the process," Story added.

All of the work in Sans Verde was created during the past year, much of it during the pandemic when social distancing has been strongly advised. Story hopes patrons experience "the beauty and variety of color in things seen and remembered... an appreciation of the variance and beauty of color in both nature and created things." All of the art will be for sale, ranging in price from $175 to $450, depending on the size and framing.

This will be Story's third exhibition at Artists Collective | Spartanburg. The first two were The Role of Shadows and Contemplating the Land. To continuously display her work, she has a personal studio at the facility. "It is a privilege to have a studio for display and be able to have a solo show in the facility," Story said. "This is my third show, and each has challenged me both to produce a body of new work and to learn from the total process."

"We have a wonderful mix of talented artists, both professional and amateur," she said about the agency. "It has been a great joy to get to know people whose paths I would not have crossed otherwise and learn from them." She has been a member of the Collective since 2015.

Story, a 40-year resident of Spartanburg, came late to painting. While her father headed art departments at two Georgia colleges, her genes never prompted any pursuit of art herself. Graduating from the University of Georgia with an education degree, her life's work has been in teaching, writing, and community service.

Greenville Technical College in Taylors, SC, Features Works by Blake Praytor and Andy Warhol

Greenville Technical College in Taylors, SC, is presenting Passages: Contrasting Photographs, featuring works by Blake Praytor and Andy Warhol, on view in the College's Benson Campus Galleries, through Sept. 25, 2020.

Passages is an exhibition of contrasts. Blake Praytor's elegant black and white photographs carefully composed and skillfully realized in the darkroom, contrasted with Andy Warhol's quick black and white photographs and Polaroids of friends and food and parties. Both made these particular photographs in the late 70's and early 80's but in different environments for different reasons and from different world views.

Praytor created the images in Passages between 1977 and 1979. He has recently remastered the silver gelatin prints digitally and reinterpreted them as a narrative sequence of diptychs. Praytor comments: "I recognize them as more than just snapshots from my journey; they are a framework for optimism, a demonstration of how even the most chaotic moments can converge to create a larger, richer, more meaningful human experience."

Praytor's photographs were created as personal, spontaneous responses to a

Her 50-year marriage has blessed her with three children and seven grandchildren. She is an avid reader and cook, and her love of travel provides much inspiration for her painting.

Her first instruction was oil painting classes with Claire Miller Hopkins at the Spartanburg Art Museum. She has since taken workshops with various artists and mentoring classes with plein air painter Jim Carson in Saluda, NC.

"I believe that both teachers and artists are born, not made," she says in her artist's statement. "There is an inner calling that prompts one to create... whether it is through the visual arts, writing, or even cooking. There are elements of painting that both educate and express emotion. My compulsive, right-brain nature leads me to faithful copying of what I see, while I struggle to show through color and contrast the feelings that have drawn me to a particular scene. While I appreciate abstract art, I am by nature a realistic painter, sometimes attempting to stretch myself to impressionism. Oils are most forgiving, and it is a contentious joy to work from a photo that speaks, to a painting that says more--hopefully, something of me."

Artists Collective | Spartanburg is the only studio art co-operative in Spartanburg County, housed in a 20,000-square-foot building that was originally a Baptist church. The mission of the non-profit and membership-based agency is to create a community of artists where members mentor and support one another. In addition, it provides affordable studio space, galleries, and stages to established and emerging artists.

Arts Council of York County in Rock Hill, SC, Features Works by Phil Moody Online

The Arts Council of York County in Rock Hill, SC, will present The Importance of Being Here: Three Photodocumentary Studies of Moments in Time in South Carolina, online at (yorkcountyarts.org/2020importance), from Sept. 11 through Oct. 25, 2020. Patrons can learn more about the artist, view his artwork, and visit the virtual galleries.

In this photodocumentary series, Phil Moody explores moments in time across the state of South Carolina through Inauguration Day, Christmas parades, and Rock Hill at night. The Importance of Being Here includes 3 bodies of work that relate to Rock Hill, SC's, 5th Congressional District, and South Carolina.

1. All Night, All Year: Rock Hill, South Carolina 2019. This project began early January 2019. Late into the night and early each morning, Moody takes photographs throughout Rock Hill. In addition to the obvious transformation that takes place when ordinary subject matter has a completely different light-source, the peaceful state that descends on what might be regarded as an ordinary Southern town provides a rich ambience.

2. January 20. In celebration of the election of Barack Obama as 44th President of the United States, Moody drove an unplanned route through the Upper Piedmont in order to document ordinary life on Inauguration Day, January 20, 2009, in South Carolina's 5th Congressional District. He has continued the practice each year since. The "rules" of this project are simple - 1. He is limited to the 24 hours of January 20, and 2. He stays within the 5th Congressional District.

3. There Will Be Only One Santa: South Carolina Christmas Parades. In the past 6 years, Moody has turned up at as many parades as he can manage. His aim is to represent every parade in the state of South Carolina with at least one picture. Currently, he is approximately halfway through this project, with over 60 parades photographed.

Phil Moody's three projects are structurally different but combine to provide a visual narrative of the state. Conceptually they share a style that is delicately balanced between documentary and visual poetry. Philosophically they represent a belief in the value of celebrating the "ordi-

Moody was born in Berwick-on-Tweed on the border of Scotland and England, and currently resides in Rock Hill. In describing his artwork, the artist says, "My work has evolved from a documentary stance, yet is still motivated by the histories of ordinary working people, with a long-held interest in the textile industry in this region of South Carolina."

Moody's work has been included in more than 80 group exhibitions in the US, England, Scotland, and Poland, and he has exhibited in 37 one-man shows since 1985. He has received grants from the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Arts & Science Council, the Scottish Arts Council, the Hope-Scott Foundation (Scotland), Winthrop and the Arts Council of York County.

Moody's artwork also appears in the collections of Bank of America, B.F. Larry Elder Art Consultancy in Charlotte, NC, Features Works by Jane Nodine at Carillon Tower

Larry Elder Art Consultancy in Charlotte, NC, is presenting Reflections: Art in the Age of Pandemic, a series of paintings Jane Allen Nodine, on view at the Gallery at Carillon, in the Carillon Tower, through Dec. 31, 2020.

Reflections started in March when states instituted stay-at-home orders and businesses closed in order to slow the spread of COVID-19. Taking a broad view of this critical and historical event, Nodine decided to use the shut-down time as an "at-home" artist residency. At the beginning she saw the process as a coping mechanism, but it soon became clear that the focused studio time began to render results in a series of new paintings that responded to the fears of the invisible virus, and yet celebrated the hopes of life and a future.

Reflections was developed using Tyvek™ and acrylic paint. Tyvek™ is a synthetic sheeting material originally designed as a moisture barrier for construction. It is highly durable and moisture-proof and accepts paint, ink and dyes and can be easily cut and sewn. Tyvek™ can be heat activated much like shrink wrap and when warmed with a heat gun, the surface begins to shrink, warp and wrinkle, creating desirable textures.

Nodine developed a technique that is original to her working process wherein she uses the manipulated Tyvek™ with acrylic paint, and applies this to panels and stretched canvases.

In 2012 she received the Award for Outstanding Artistic Achievement by the Southeastern College Art Conference and in 2002 she was awarded a Belle W. Nodine's work is included in numerous collections including three Chinese Universities, the Medical University of South Carolina, Equitable Life Assurance Society - NYC, Stadtsparkasse Bank - Germany, and multiple works in the South Carolina State Art Collection. Hickory Museum of Art in Hickory, NC, Celebrates Women's Right to Vote with Exhibitions

Works by Susan Lenz

The Hickory Museum of Art in Hickory, NC, will present Suffrage, featuring works by 6 regional artists, and The Feminist To Do List, an installation by fiber artist Susan Lenz, both on view from Sept. 12 through Jan. 24, 2021.

In conjunction with the History Museum of Catawba County, the Catawba County Library System, and the League of Women Voters, Hickory Museum of Art presents an exhibition celebrating the 100th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment.

Entitled Suffrage, the exhibition highlights significant historical happenings that led to the passing of women's right to vote. Responding to a call for artists, 6 regional artists will be chosen to create artwork for the exhibition that responds to themes associated with the women's suffrage movement. Exhibition panels are being created by Catawba Valley Community College graphic design students.

The exhibition will also feature an installation called The Feminist To Do List by fiber artist Susan Lenz. The installation is a collection of forty-two altered, vintage quilt blocks presented in 10" diameter wooden embroidery hoops with call-to-action phrases (such as Run for Office, Speak Up, Protest Peacefully, Challenge the Status Quo, etc.) stitched on each one.

The work was inspired by the early Suffragists and the upcoming centennial celebration of the 19th amendment. The use of decades-old Sun Bonnet Sue quilt blocks recalls the years of struggle before women were granted the right to vote and serves as a reminder that gender equality is still an ongoing issue.

if ART Gallery in Columbia, SC, Presents the Unselfie in Group Show

if ART Gallery in Columbia, SC, is presenting Selfie/Unselfie, a group show of 14 gallery artists from five states and two countries, on view through Sept. 12, 2020. Because of COVID-19 concerns, there will be no artists' reception. It's mandatory to wear a face mask inside of the gallery and practice social distancing.

All paintings, sculptures and photos in the exhibition will feature the figure in some fashion. "As the inventor of the unselfie," if ART owner Wim Roefs says, "I thought this was an especially opportune time to organize this exhibition. COVID times has revealed how self-absorbed and selfish people can be, how little regard they can have for the well-being of others. Selfies are not necessarily about selfishness, but selfie-takers, especially those with selfie sticks, can be obnoxious in their disregard for others. And selfies often are about being self-absorbed."

The exhibition will include works by Columbia artists Michaela Pilar Brown, Jeff Donovan, Anna Redwine, David Yaghjian and the late Laura Spong; Augusta, GA, artists Philip Morsberger and Edward Rice; Steven Chapp and Dorothy Netherland of respectively Easley and Charleston, SC; Chicago's Peter Lenzo, formerly of Columbia; Washington, DC's, Marcelo Novo, also formerly of Columbia; Mark Flowers of Alexander, NC; Leslie Hinton of Clinton, LA; and Kees Salentijn of The Netherlands.

"Several years ago," Roefs says, "after the selfie had established itself as an indicator of people's indulgent, self-obsessed and narcissistic tendencies, I came upon the idea for the unselfie. It seemed like a good counterbalance to selfiedom and its adherents and a reminder that there were times when cameras were aimed not at the one holding it but at others."

The unselfie, Roefs acknowledges, could not have been invented without the emergence of the selfie. Once the selfie proliferated, however, the need for the unselfie became clear. To create an unselfie, Roefs instructs, take a camera, aim it at a person other than oneself and take a picture. Then check the image to make sure the other person, not the one who took the photo, appears in the frame. If so, the creation of the unselfie was successful. "It's actually quite simple, if you think about it," Roefs says.

Artists were, of course, the original producers of selfies. Ever since the arrival

Center for Craft in Asheville, NC, Offers Look at Early Craft Movement

The Center for Craft in Asheville, NC, is presenting Crafted Roots: Stories and Objects from the Appalachian Mountains, on view in the John Cram Partner Gallery, through Oct. 30, 2020. The exhibition was curated by Michael Hatch, Class of 2020, MA in Critical Craft Studies, Warren Wilson College.

The exhibition at the Center for Craft will examine the foundational moments in the late 1800s and early 1900s that laid the groundwork for the thriving craft scene found in the Asheville region today.

This exhibition is the first of a series developed by Warren Wilson College putting the national craft landscape in the context of the local Asheville community, other creative disciplines and the liberal arts.

In the past, there was a stark contrast between small urban centers like Asheville and the remote rural areas that surrounded them. The turn of the century marked a major transition for the people living in these rural places, because urban missionaries arrived from other parts of the country with the goal of “uplifting” rural communities through the revival and marketing of traditional craft techniques. These actions proved successful in what we would call the “branding” of Appalachian craft today. Contemporary scholars have critically examined the missionaries’ manipulation of “traditional” craft designs to appeal to urban markets and their role in defining Appalachia and its people to areas outside of the region.

This story has been represented and examined in exhibitions and texts for more than 100 years. Crafted Roots provides a unique perspective through the use of audio recordings, historical documents, images and objects from the archives and permanent collections of the Southern Highlands Craft Guild. This is the first exhibition that allows the urban missionaries and regional craftspeople to speak for themselves through audio extracts from oral history recordings projected into the gallery.

“I feel oral histories are an important component of any multidisciplinary research methodology,” said Michael Hatch, the curator of Crafted Roots. “In academic circles, we spend a lot of time talking about people and referencing others who have previously talked about them. Oral histories allow people to speak for themselves. They provide a path to de-essentialize our thinking about groups of people by focusing on individual identities within these groups.”

Hatch’s research includes three years of listening, extracting and editing previously untapped oral history recordings from the Guild’s archives, and it serves as the springboard for this curatorial project.

“This exhibition asks you to de-accelerate, to actively listen,” Hatch said. “Eric Franklin, of the Loveland Museum, one of my program mentors, says that when he listens to these recordings he feels as if he is in the room with the narrators, sitting across the table from them as they tell him their stories. That is the feeling that this exhibition seeks to evoke through scenography that evokes parlors and cabins. You are invited to sit and spend time with transcripts and photo albums as you listen to missionaries and regional craftspeople recall memories from the early 20th century.”

“We are thrilled to host Crafted Roots in the Center for Craft’s new John Cram Partner Gallery” said Assistant Director and Curator Marilyn Zapf. “Hatch’s well-researched exhibition shines a light on the history of how Asheville earned its reputation as an internationally recognized hub for high-quality craft production. As we continue to steward craft’s legacy in western North Carolina, hearing first-hand accounts from and seeing objects made during the Craft Revival evoke questions and reflections about craft’s role in regional development that continue to be relevant today.”

Hatch is a member of the inaugural graduating Class of 2020 of the MA in

Southern Highlands Craft Guild wood carvers

Critical Craft Studies at Warren Wilson College.

“This program is the first of its kind,” said Namita Gupta Wiggers, program director. “Michael Hatch is one of nine inaugural graduates of this low-residency graduate program that focuses on craft histories and theory. His exhibition clearly puts his research questions into public view. Taking time in Crafted Roots will help visitors understand how craft has come to be associated with the region, as well as how stereotypes and myths are constructed through what is – and is not – publicly available from archives. Michael’s exhibition shows research in action that can shift how craft is understood as part of culture and community.”

Hatch’s project connects program curriculum and research with his own experience in the craft field. For more than 20 years, Hatch has operated Crucible Glassworks, an Asheville-area glassblowing studio and gallery. He currently serves as the vice president of the Board of Trustees for the Southern Highland Craft Guild. Hatch began the two-year MA in Critical Craft Studies program each semester in intensive on-site residencies in North Carolina, alternating between July on the Warren Wilson College Campus and January in Asheville, with classes taking place at the Center for Craft, founding program partner. Guided by international faculty from multiple disciplines, the program uses research as an applied practice to connect students’ project work in the Swannanoa/Asheville area to that in their own hometowns.

Crafted Roots is presented in collaboration between program partners Warren Wilson College and the Center for Craft. This exhibition was developed by Hatch as his final Practicum Project towards degree completion. Special thanks to Nikki Joseff, curator at the Southern Highland Craft Guild, for guidance and for arranging the loan of objects and archives from the Guild’s collection.

Center for Craft in Asheville, NC, Offers 2020 Curatorial Fellows Exhibit

The Center for Craft in Asheville, NC, is presenting the first exhibition from its 2020 Curatorial Fellows program, The Computer Pays its Debt, which explores the connection between technology and textiles, on view through Oct. 9, 2020.

This exhibition illuminates the direct connection between computing technology and weaving, and is now on view at the Center for Craft following a three-month closure due to the coronavirus pandemic. Viewable by pre-registration through Oct. 9, 2020, the show positions women who worked with technology and textiles at the heart of the information age. Kaleigh Perkov, 2020 Curatorial Fellow, drew the exhibition’s title and theme from a 1966 New York Times interview with IBM computer scientist and weaver Janice Lourie, creator of the Textile Graphics software, in which she argues that it was “about time that [computing’s] debt to the weaving trade was paid back.”

Work by Lia Cook

The statement links computers to the nineteenth-century Jacquard Loom, which used punch cards as proto-programming. The loom directly influenced Charles Babbage and Ada Lovelace, considered the first programmer, when they invented the analytical engine – the precursor to our modern computers – in the nineteenth century. Perkov and the ten renowned artists in the exhibition, including Lourie, Sonia Sheridan, Sonya Rapoport, and Lia Cook, recenter the role of women in technology by elevating other voices and histories beyond Lovelace, offering up new ways of seeing the relationship between identity, creativity, and technology.

Participating artist Daniela Rosner, a collaborator on Core Memory Quilt, explores “the process by which we build technologies,” was inspired by archival footage of two women weaving “core memory ropes” that stored programming for the Apollo space missions in an example of electronic-textile hybridity. She and collaborator Samantha Shorey saw an immediate link between these women’s actions and textile production. “We began

Though she has worked in other mediums, Elinor Bowman currently prefers to use watercolors or ink. She has painted models from life, and lately has enjoyed painting many subjects, from still life to animals. “I’ve had several teachers, in classes and privately, but currently two new granddaughters provide my inspiration.”

Bowman moved to Asheville in 2002, which gave her time to paint. Her work can be seen at Asheville Gallery of Art and at Tracks Studios in the River Arts District in Asheville. She is a member of

to think about memory as both computer memory and in terms of often gendered processes like quilting and craftwork,” she notes. “What you might think of as a quilt – made of pieces of fabric left behind and associated with being unpaid, unthinking work done mostly by women – was actually critical to launching the Apollo missions to the moon and back.”

Like the other participating artists, Rosner uses craft as a lens to “think about how things get made, and who makes them.” Through her piece, she questions “what kinds of bodies, hands, and locales are involved in the production of technology, and how those choices in the development process can shape what’s made possible and what’s closed off.”

This is the first exhibition from this year’s 2020 Curatorial Fellowship recipients. Each year, the Curatorial Fellowship recognizes up-and-coming curators working at the cutting edge of craft. Three recipients organize shows at the Center for Craft to Asheville as part of the Center’s larger conversation around craft and its evolution. Learn more at (centerforcraft.org).

Reopening in August under limited hours, the Center is offering free, unguided visits and affordable tours of its exhibitions to the public. Guests can pre-register for a 30-minute visit to explore the current exhibitions, learn more about the Center’s national impact in their Craft Research Fund Study Collection, and enjoy interactive activities.

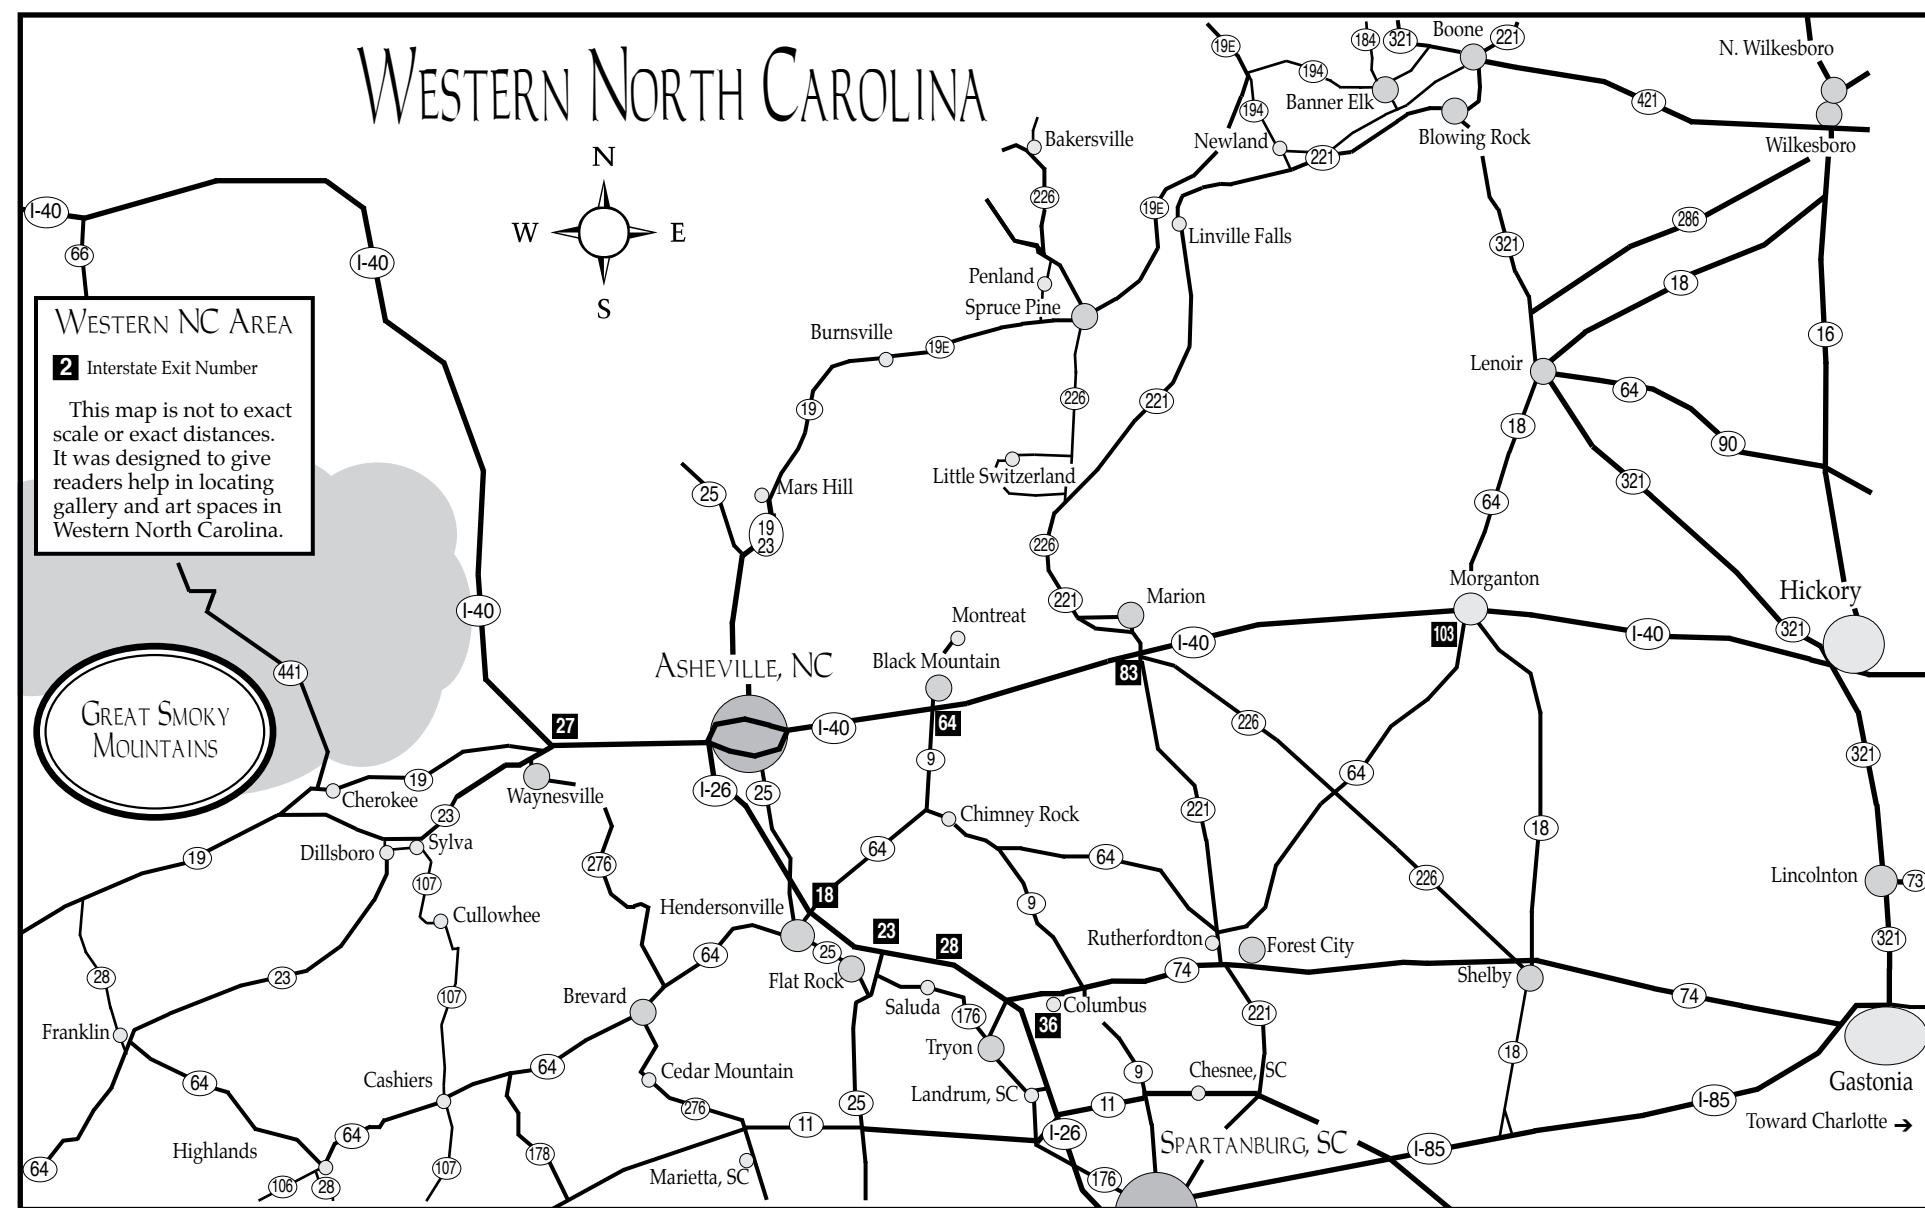

Center for Craft is monitoring the effects of COVID-19 on the community and following the instruction of federal, state, and local health departments. “Flowers and landscapes are the most attractive subjects I can think of to paint,” says Olga Michelson. She enjoys painting scenes around Asheville and nearby Beaver Lake. “I try to capture changes in the atmosphere surrounding my subjects to make my paintings more emotional, mysterious and personal.”

Originally from Russia, Michelson was born and raised in Moscow, where she received her art education. While there, she worked as a decorator for the Moscow Drama Theater and as an assistant architect for the Moscow City Restoration Project.

The Asheville Gallery of Art, the longest-established fine arts gallery in Asheville, is celebrating 30 years in business. Founded in historic downtown in 1988, before our city became the thriving art mecca that it is today, AGA represents the vision of some of Asheville’s most talented artists. We thank these bold and fearless pioneers who helped build our flourishing art community with passion and hard work. As a 31-member cooperative, each gallery artist is a co-owner who not only displays artwork at the gallery but works to keep the business running. In fact, each day one of our artists clerks at the gallery. Prospective members are chosen through a jury process among dozens of applicants each year.

Lynch also incorporates a resourceful, environmental concern in her process. “My work starts with the simple idea of not adding to landfills,” she notes. “I use high quality materials like designer upholstery scraps, sample books or memos, remnants and dead stock. I work hard to use scraps of all sizes and waste as little as possible.”

And lastly, Lynch focuses on durability and quality. “I take my time while sewing to make sure that all seams are double sewn, and stress points get lots of attention. Everything I make is lined, and typically interfaced several times for structure and longevity.”

Arts Council of Winston-Salem & Forsyth County, NC, Features Works by Jasmine Huff and Nannette Davis

The Arts Council of Winston-Salem & Forsyth County in Winston-Salem, NC, is presenting Form / Texture / Light / Shadow, featuring collaborative work by jewelry designer Nannette Davis and photographer Jasmine Huff, on view in the Arboreal Gallery, of the Milton Rhodes Center for the Arts, through Sept. 24, 2020.

Visitors will be required to wear face masks, or other appropriate face coverings, and observe social distancing guidelines. To facilitate compliance with current maximum capacity guidelines, visitors may be asked to wait temporarily in adjacent areas of the Rhodes Center before entering the gallery.

Nannette Davis debuted a custom jewelry collection with fashion designer Puja Arora at Winston-Salem Fashion Week 2018, which developed into a collection that was shown at New York Fashion Week 2019. Subsequently, Davis and photographer Jasmine Huff began discussing how photography could be used creatively to enhance the presentation of the jewelry.

“We quickly discovered that we inspire each other, with our individual bodies of work compelling the other to grow within our unique mediums. Each work echoed off the other. The light and shadow in Jasmine’s photography reflected the texture and form in my jewelry,” said Davis.

“We came up with a vision that you might call a ‘photographic narrative’ that showcased not only how the jewelry was to be worn, but how each piece transforms its wearer,” said Huff. “My photography offers a new view of the collection, which elevates both the models and the jewelry they are wearing into works of art, wholly and fully beautiful. Nannette shared that vision, and it continues as the foundation of our Jasmine and Nannette collaboration.”

The exhibition has evolved over the last several months since the onset of the COVID-19 virus. Art Nouveau Winston-Salem, the under-40 affiliate organization of The Arts Council of Winston-Salem & Forsyth County, originally conceived the exhibition for the Duke Energy Gallery in the Hanesbrands Theatre. When Hanesbrands Theatre was closed due to COVID-19, the exhibition was expanded and moved next door to the Arboreal Gallery in the Milton Rhodes Center for the Arts, with The Arts Council as lead sponsor.

Art Nouveau member, Lindsay Piper Potter-Figueiredo, assumed the duties of curator and played a key role, along with Shannon Stokes, Patron Services and Events Manager at The Arts Council, who is the exhibition’s coordinating producer. The models for the jewelry in the exhibition are Jerotich Yegon and Emily Ortiz Badalamente.

Winston-Salem, known as the “City of Arts & Innovation”, and Forsyth County have a robust arts community that enriches the lives of area residents every day and accounts in large part for the recognition they continue to receive as a great place to live, learn, work and play. Forsyth County’s nonprofit arts industry supports more than 5,550 full time equivalent jobs; accounts for more than $129 million in resident household income; and generates more than $14.8 million in local and state tax revenues.

Sunset River Marketplace in Calabash, NC, Offers Work from the 400th Firing from Jeffcoat Pottery - Sept. 7, 2020

Sunset River Marketplace in Calabash, NC, has announced a special sale of Jeffcoat Pottery pieces following the death of long time potter Joe Jeffcoat, gallery owner Ginny Lassiter has announced.

"Joe and his wife, Tonda, have been part of the Sunset River family almost from day one," says Lassiter. "We're heartbroken that Joe has passed. Everybody loved him. And their traditional wheel-thrown pottery with surface carving has been immensely popular here at the gallery."

Joe Jeffcoat died on June 8 following complications from a fall and resulting surgery. At the time of his death Joe and Tonda were in the midst of readying for their 400th pottery firing, Tonda says, "As we completed our 398th, then 399th firings, Joe kept saying, 'We need to do something to celebrate 400.' We were going to each make some special pottery - Joe, me, the kids. So when Joe passed away, we did create some family pieces in addition to the work for the gallery. And every single piece in this firing - over 250 of them - is marked 400F. All but the family pieces will be available at Sunset River Marketplace in Calabash."

The Jeffcoats have combined their talents and love of clay in the creation of functional pottery since 1974. Tonda, an art educator and Joe, a retired banker, graduated from Atlantic Christian College and continued their study of pottery in the first ceramic class at Wilson Technical Institute in Wilson, NC. Additional study with Lanny Pelletier, Hiroshi Sueyoshi and Frank Byrd provided the critical fundamentals that allowed them to develop their own personal style. Joe often credited their association and friendship with Dan Finch at Finch Pottery in Bailey, NC, as playing a major role in their continued growth as potters.

After retiring in 2005, they moved to Little River, SC, and opened Jeffcoat Pottery just outside of Calabash, NC. Often the pair would collaborate, with Joe throwing forms on the wheel and Tonda carving the surface of each.

Cheryl Newby Gallery in Pawleys Island, SC, Features Works by Quita Brodhead

Cheryl Newby Gallery in Pawleys Island, SC, will present Quita Brodhead (1901 - 2002) Treasures from the Estate, on view from Sept. 4 through Oct. 17, 2020.

"Quita Brodhead - Ms. Brodhead is quite simply a phenomenon," from the New York Times, 2001.

Marie Waggaman Berl was born in 1901 and raised in Wilmington, DE. Her father nicknamed her "Mariequita" - "Little Marie", to distinguish her from her mother whose name was also Marie. She shortened that nickname to Quita as an adult. In 1919, when she graduated from a convent school, her mother insisted that she go to a Catholic college in Washington, DC. But Quita didn't want to go to another religious school. They compromised and Quita went the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts ("PAFA") and commuted from her parents' home in Wilmington to Philadelphia.

Brodhead studied at PAFA from 1920 to 1925 under the tutelage of the highly regarded artist and teacher Arthur Beecher Carles. Carles had studied and painted in France in the 1890s and early 20th century and shared his love of the impressionists and of Matisse and Picasso with his students. Color, form, and line were what the new art was about. Carles became Quita's mentor and inspired her to paint the way she did. In the summer of 1923, she traveled to Paris and painted at the Academie Julian and La Grande Chaumiere. On her return, she continued studying with Carles through 1926, and in 1927, she studied with Alexander Archipenko in Woodstock, NY.

In 1927, she married Truxtun Brodhead and moved to Wayne, PA. She gave birth to three children and suffered through an unhappy marriage that ended in divorce. In the 1930s and 40s, she had shows in New York City and throughout the Philadelphia area. Later she would paint in Paris, Rome, Southern France, and Tenerife in the Canary Islands. She had more than 20 solo exhibitions and multiple group shows in major cities in Europe and the United States. Her paintings are found in the permanent collections of more than twenty major museums, including the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, Woodmere Art Museum, New Jersey State Museum, Delaware State Museum, and the State Museum of Pennsylvania.

Sunset River Marketplace showcases work by approximately 150 North and South Carolina artists, and houses some 10,000 square feet of oils, acrylics, watercolors, pastels, mixed media, art glass, fabric art, pottery, sculpture, turned and carved wood and artisan-created jewelry.

Due to State mandates and COVID-19 restrictions, masks or face coverings are required. The gallery continues to host Coffee With the Authors, a series of presentations by local and regional authors. Social distancing is maintained.

ries, and changes in the world around her. Through the decades, she segued from figurative still lifes and portraits to abstract expressionism. She was inspired by the Space Program and the Hubble Telescope to launch her "Endless Circle" and "Whence and Where" series. Well into her nineties, she told an interviewer "I am always interested in the next surge of things to come."

In 2001, celebrating her 100 birthday, PAFA hosted an exhibition Quita Brodhead Paintings 1920 - 2001, and The Hollis Taggart Gallery in New York City presented Quita Brodhead - Celebrating a Century. At the conclusion of the Hollis Taggart show, Grace Glueck, senior art critic for the New York Times said, "The gifts of long life and the talent to live it rewardingly do not go to many. Ms. Brodhead is quite simply a phenomenon".

Francis Marion University in Florence, SC, Features Works by Will Penny

Francis Marion University in Florence, SC, will present Will Penny: Neutral Zone, on view at the University Place Gallery, from Sept. 8 through Oct. 23, 2020.

Penny's immersive installation features a combination of digital and experimental media representing the artist's interests in simulation, interactivity, and technoromanticism. Borrowing from a range of sources including science fiction, fantasy art, gestural abstraction and other artistic formal conventions, the works within Neutral Zone present a variety of approaches to representing experience as fragments and components of a larger whole, mediated through time-based video and sculptural works. The slippage between simulation, illusion and reality is the space in which the Neutral Zone is situated.

Will Penny (b. 1984) was raised in Southern Ontario and currently resides in Savannah, GA. He has received a diploma in Fine Art from Fanshawe College in London, Ontario, Canada and a BFA and MFA in Painting from The Savannah College of Art and Design, where he currently serves as Professor of Digital Communication.

Penny's artworks dissolve traditional boundaries of art and design. His art explores tensions between the tangible space a painting inhabits, the impact of digital technology on fabricated forms and illusionistic environments. By creating systems of interactivity with digital technologies, his art confronts the way information is generated, transmitted and received.

Penny has exhibited in The United States and Canada.

Hillsborough Gallery of Arts in Hillsborough, NC, Offers Exhibit by Three of the Gallery's Artists

The Hillsborough Gallery of Arts in Hillsborough, NC, is presenting Working Outside the Lines, featuring works by painters Lolette Guthrie and Marcy Lansman and glass artist Pringle Teetor, on view through Sept. 24, 2020.

Lolette Guthrie's paintings are depictions of her memories of coastal North Carolina. "As I now shelter in place, I enjoy remembering the beauty of the landscape, the space, the light, the atmosphere, the weather. I begin every painting with a general idea of time and place and then let it tell me where and how far to go. While I sometimes look at photos to get a starting point, I find myself seeing and feeling what I want to paint in my mind's eye, putting down on canvas what I remember."

"...Long interest in composition, color relationships and the edges of a piece, has led me to create a series of abstractions of the coastal sky by itself," says Guthrie. Some of her pieces are without any foreground at all but still evoke a sense weather, time of day, temperature and beauty.

Artist Marcy Lansman has taken a whole new path for this show by painting landscapes with a palette knife. "Last fall, just for the fun of it, I took a course in palette knife painting. The technique grabbed hold of me. It demanded that I let go of all attempts a precision. (Hence, "Outside the Lines.") And it was particularly suited to capturing the sparkling fall colors I was seeing outside.

"Now, during the social isolation imposed by COVID-19, morning walks in the woods have been my escape. During the rest of the day, while we have been shut up in our apartment, I have continued to use the palette knife to paint the scenes I see during my morning walks," says Lansman.

Due to shoulder and arm surgery last year, glass blower Pringle Teetor knew she would have to change course while she recovered. So she concentrated on small pieces that she could make without assistance. "Fortunately, I was able to make fused pieces and jewelry at home," says Teetor. "I then switched to making tumblers and sun catchers, which I knew I could do alone. Tumblers are a lot like

Some Exhibits That Are Still On View

Our policy at Carolina Arts is to present a press release about an exhibit only once and then go on, but many major exhibits are on view for months. This is our effort to remind you of some of them.

Work by Yvette L. Cummings

The Franklin G. Burroughs - Simeon B. Chapin Art Museum in Myrtle Beach, SC, is presenting Yvette L. Cummings | Everything Will Be Ok, on view through Sept. 13, 2020. Cummings, a figurative artist in Conway, SC, explores the implied power of the gaze. Gazes can often reflect emotion without speech and offer information about relationships between those doing the gazing, whether that be the viewer of a painting or the subjects pictured in the painting itself. Cummings' colorful, pattern-filled paintings and installations delight the eye while simultaneously revealing serious undertones in their imagery - messages of conflict expressed from the viewpoint of a sexual abuse survivor. Cummings received her MFA at the University of Cincinnati's School of Design, Architecture, Art, and Planning in 2003. She is currently Assistant Professor of Visual Arts in Painting and Drawing at Coastal Carolina University in Conway. For further information call the Museum at 843/238-2510 or visit (www.myrtlebeachartmuseum.org).

City Art Gallery in Columbia, SC, is presenting Four Decades of Patton Blackwell, on view through Sept. 30, 2020. Blackwell's work is deeply rooted in her experience of her surroundings, and her desire to translate this experience to the canvas. She captures the essence of atmosphere and landscape in her use of color, action, and brush stroke. Infused with beauty and passion, Blackwell's paintings embody both the tangible and the intangible. From the lush green rolling fields and dense foliage of Camden, SC, where her home and studio are located, to the streets of Rio de Janeiro during Carnival, to time spent on the Aegean Sea, Blackwell crethey developed identifiably American artistic movements. Two particularly strong influences during this time period were French Impressionism and Japanese woodblock prints. Another prevailing theme during this period was the growing interest in American subject matter. Work by Yvette L. Cummings

Franklin G. Burroughs - Simeon B. Chapin Art Museum, 3100 South Ocean Blvd., beside Springmaid Beach, Myrtle Beach. Through Sept. 13 - "Yvette L. Cummings | Everything Will Be Ok". Cummings, a figurative artist in Conway, SC, explores the implied power of the gaze. Gazes can often reflect emotion without speech and offer information about relationships between those doing the gazing, whether that be the viewer of a painting or the subjects pictured in the painting itself. Cummings' colorful, pattern-filled paintings and installations delight the eye while simultaneously revealing serious undertones in their imagery — messages of conflict expressed from the viewpoint of a sexual abuse survivor. Through Sept. 13 - "Voice Lessons I Eli Corbin, Fran Gardner, Lisa Stroud and Beau Wild". Focusing on issues women have dealt with for centuries, Voice Lessons is a multi-media visual-arts narrative of women's lives — the strength, tenacity and courage demonstrated by our mothers, sisters, daughters and friends. Shifting the dialogue toward empowerment, the art of four female artists, Eli Corbin (Asheville, NC), Fran Gardner (Health Springs, SC), Lisa Stroud (Cary, NC) and Beau Wild (Port Orange, FL), illustrates the multi-dimensional reality of womanhood — as intelligent and sexual and as powerful and feminine, with emotional range. Voice Lessons encourages tolerance, empathy and compassion among women and men, as it draws together the struggle, strength, vulnerability, individuality and community of the female experience. Cecil Williams Civil Rights Museum, 1865 Lake Drive, Orangeburg. Ongoing - Established in 2019, the exquisite ultra-modern facility displays 1000 images of the Civil Rights Movement, but from the perspective of The Episcopal South Carolina Events That Changed America. The massive archives comprise the largest collection of images of this type among all museums in the United States; including the Atlanta based High Museum which archives 300 images. The images were created by the founder, Cecil Williams, who began photography at age 9 and covered almost all historically significant events in South Carolina; from 1950 Briggs v. Elliot in Summerton, thru the 1969 Charleston Hospital Workers' Strike...and Beyond. From 1955 through 1969, Williams was a freelance journalist for "JET" magazine. His images have appeared in thousands of magazines, newspapers, historical publications, and motion picture productions. The museum design itself is part of the founders' DNA because; upon graduating from high school, Williams wanted to attend Clemson University to study architecture but denied because of his race. He then purchased a drafting board and through the years, designed three residences; including one featured in "EBONY", and the museum's design which has evolved into a living history facility. Spartanburg

Throughout downtown Spartanburg's Cultural District, Ongoing - The Creative Crosswalk Project is a public art initiative in which local artists and designers design and paint a series of crosswalk murals, transforming the crosswalks into works of art, on Main Street in Spartanburg, SC. The downtown cultural district area is often bustling with events and pedestrians, and the pedestrians rely heavily on a multitude of crosswalks to safely traverse the downtown Spartanburg area. The problem is that crosswalks are incredibly easy to overlook, they are rarely visually appealing, and they can even be quite dangerous. In an effort to remedy these issues, Chapman Cultural Center, the City of Spartanburg, and the Spartanburg Area Chamber of Commerce came together to organize the Creative Crosswalk Project. For more info visit (<https://www.chapmanculturalcenter.org/pages/blog/detail/article/c0/a1555/>).

Tiring of this, I challenged myself to explore other color palettes," the Georgia native said. "I put away every tube of green oil paint for the last nine months, and the few greens I have used in this exhibit have been mixed from other colors." The exhibition of 18-20 works will be open for free public viewing Tue.-Sat., 10am-4pm. However, because of the COVID-19 pandemic, exhibition hours may change without notice, and the public should refer to the facility's website (ArtistsCollectiveSpartanburg.org) for the most current information. Ongoing - The Collective features a twenty thousand square foot facility offering affordable studio space, retail space, three galleries, a full ceramics studio, printery, and works by 50 local artists. City Art, 1224 Lincoln Street, Columbia. Through Sept. 30 - "Four Decades of Patton Blackwell", featuring an exhibit of paintings by Patton Blackwell. Blackwell's work is deeply rooted in her experience of her surroundings, and her desire to translate this experience to the canvas. Infused with beauty and passion, Blackwell's paintings embody both the tangible and the intangible. From the lush green rolling fields and dense foliage of Camden, South Carolina, where her home and studio are located, to the streets of Rio de Janeiro during Carnival, to time spent on the Aegean Sea, Blackwell creates mosaics of swirling paint that radiate light and power, reflecting moments and spaces in time that are both active and meditative, universal and timeless. Referencing the works of such artists as Willem de Kooning, and Wassily Kandinsky, Blackwell's paintings recall the physicality and emotion of de Kooning's animated brushwork while evoking the spiritual resonance of Kandinsky's later work. Ongoing - Featuring works by Jane Aldridge, Jim Arendt, Randolph New Armstrong, Penny Baskin, Jo Dean Bauknigh, Robbie Bell, Kimberly Bethman, Tarleton Blackwell, Angela Bradburn, Betty Bramlett, Joe Byrne, Carolita Cantrell, Kathy Casey, Anne Cunninghamham, Bob Doster, Gerard Erley, Claire Farrell, Amy Fichter, Tim Floyd, Michael Fowler, Teri Goddard, Harriet Goode, Vanessa Grubbs, Randy Hanna, Shelley Hehenberger, Mana Hewitt, David Kessler, Jan Kransberger, Robert Lyon, Rena MacQueen, Doug McAbee, Fred McElveen, Esther Melton, Max Miller, Lee A. Best known for creating airy watercolors and deft ink sketches, Fickett, a native New Englander, spent more than 35 years preserving Greensboro sights: iconic businesses, churches, college campuses, and other landmarks. She drew and painted wherever she went - the North Carolina coast, the Piedmont, the mountains - as well as Bermuda, a favorite vacation spot; the rocky coast of Maine, her native state; and the architecture-rich streets of Boston, where she first worked as an advertising illustrator. Fickett returned to Maine in 2014, and hundreds of her works were stored in Greensboro for safekeeping. She died at age 89 on March 26, 2020. The Center for Visual Artists will use proceeds from the exhibit to establish a plein air painting class in Fickett's memory. Weatherspoon Art Museum, University of North Carolina - Greensboro, Cone Building, Tate and Spring Garden Streets, Greensboro. Now - Visit the Museum's website to see these virtual exhibits. The Leah Louise B. Tannenbaum and Louise D. and Herbert S. Falk, Sr. Galleries, Through Nov. 15 - "Bold Expressions: Geometric Abstractions from the Collection". Fun, light-hearted, and beautiful. Many of us crave these elements nowadays, especially during these unprecedented times. As the museum re-opens to the campus and the broader community mid-August (pending NC state guidelines), its first-floor galleries will feature artworks that highlight bold color, non-illusionistic space, and hard-edged geometric compositions. Although abstract geometric art has existed as a language of expression since antiquity, it acquired new resonance with European artists in the early twentieth century. Shortly thereafter, a younger generation of American artists began exploring the tradition, especially in the 1960s. Since then the language has remained both essential and vibrant, as these paintings, sculptures, and drawings illustrates. This exhibition is organized by Elaine D. Gustafson, Curator of Collections. Atrium and Lobbies - Featuring works of art complementing current gallery exhibitions which are rotated in the atrium and public areas throughout both floors of the gallery. Tom Otterness' site-specific work, "The Frieze" is permanently installed in the atrium. Sculpture Courtyard - Featuring selections of American sculpture from 1900 to the present from the Weatherspoon Collection and on loan works from contemporary artists. Admission: Free. Hours: Tue., Wed. & Fri., 10am-5pm, Thur., 10am to 9pm and Sat. & Sun., 1-5pm. Contact: 336/334-5770 or at (<http://weatherspoon.uncg.edu/>).

When Scherr (Akron, OH 1921- Raleigh, NC 2016) moved from New York City to Raleigh in 1989, she was already an internationally renowned designer who had chaired the first Crafts Department at Parsons School of Design in Manhattan, innovated metal-etching techniques, and pioneered jewelry and accessories that also functioned as body monitors. Pink Dog Creative Gallery, 348 Depot Street, in the River Arts District, Asheville. Through 2020 - "In Solidarity," an online exhibition by Pink Dog Creative artists and associated friends, seeks to speak to the violence, fear and grief caused by centuries of injustice to Black people and to celebrate the many contributions made by people of African descent to the culture of this country and the world. At Pink Dog we stand for justice and equity for everyone. We are outraged and saddened by the recent deaths of George Floyd, Ahmaud Arbery and Breonna Taylor and the unnecessary violence against Johnnie Rush in our own city. These names are only the more recent victims in a long history of racism in this country. We believe that artists speak to our times and that art can uplift, enlighten and encourage dialogue. Art can be a vehicle for social change. Up to 100% from the sale of art from this exhibition will go to the following charities whose mission is justice and equity, Black Lives Matter, BeLoved Asheville, and the Equal Justice Initiative. We encourage you to join us in donating to organizations that are working to progress racial equality. Pink Dog Creative will match all donations from sales from this exhibition.
